French Flyers Received Today By President Hoover

LINDBERGH PRESENT AT CEREMONIES

Trans-Atlantic Fliers Are Received Officially at White House Today

PROGRAM IS CROWDED

Board of Trade Will Hold Dinner and Reception For Aviators Tonight

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—(UP)—In the rose garden at the White House, President Hoover today greeted the French trans-Atlantic fliers, Gaste and Bellonte, and hailed their air adventure as a demonstration "that there are no limits to the courage of men and that there are no limits to what that courage can accomplish."

The American air heroes, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, and Edward Rickenbacker, were grouped around the chief executive while he read a short address of welcome to the men who spanned the Atlantic in one hop from Paris to New York.

The two oddly contrasting Frenchmen—Coste is dark, stocky and debonair while Bellonte is blond, slender and not so dashing—flew their Question Mark down from Bolling Field. But the official receptions, public appearances and speeches, with the exception of an informal greeting extended by Mr. Hoover through a secretary, were put over until today.

A crowded program was arranged for these two modest aviators who have been amazed at the enthusiasm with which they have been greeted in New York, Dallas, Louisville and here. First was the visit to the tomb of the unknown soldier, to place a wreath and return the gesture of good will performed by Charles A. Lindbergh when he flew the Atlantic in the opposite direction. A visit to various government departments was next, with their appearance at the White House, to be received by President Hoover, set for 12:30 p. m.

A distinguished list of guests was invited by Mr. Hoover to the state luncheon at 1:15 p. m., including Lindbergh, Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd and Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker. The others were Vice President Curtis, Postmaster General Brown, Secretary of Navy Adams, Secretary of Agriculture Hyde, Secretary of Commerce Lamont, Secretary of State Cotton, Undersecretary of Labor Davis, Gen. John J. Pershing, French Charge d'Affaires Jules Henry, Maj. Georges Thennault, aviation aid of the French embassy; Maj. Gen. James E. Fehet, chief of the army air corps; Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of the naval bureau of aeronautics; Assistant Secretary of Commerce Young, Assistant Secretary of War Davis, Assistant Secretary of Navy Ingalls, White House secretaries and aides, and attaches of the French embassy.

In the evening the fliers will be guests of honor at a board of trade banquet in the Willard hotel.

DEATH TOLL IN SANTO DOMINGO IS OVER 4000

Property Damage Is Estimated Over $30,000,000 By Red Cross

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic, Sept. 8.—(UP)—Gangrene threatened hundreds of victims injured by the hurricane that wrecked Santo Domingo as the city strove today to re-establish its water supply and remove further danger from pestilence.

The death toll was increased hourly by gangrene and lock jaw, from which scores are suffering. Doctors and nurses worked without sleep in overcrowded hospitals, badly handicapped by a serious lack of medical supplies.

It was impossible to learn the exact number of deaths because bodies were cremated without identification by several brigades working separately. It was necessary to burn the bodies as soon as possible.

Estimates of the fatalities so far, however, have reached more than 4000.

An official commission appointed to survey the damage to the city has already calculated the property damage at $30,000,000. A census will be taken from house to house as soon as possible to arrive at an official estimate of the dead, the injured, and the property losses.

Preventive measures in the harbor still prevent relief vessels from unloading, and ships were obliged to land their cargoes in their own boats.

Lighters and barges were all destroyed by the storm. The risk and difficulty in landing precious food, clothing and medical supplies added to the delay of relief work.

A city exhausted, in an attempt to raise itself from ruin was alarmed by rumors that a new storm was approaching from Trinidad. Fortunately, the reports were false.

Vaccination against typhoid started at police headquarters and other vaccination stations were being organized. The rapid spread of gangrene alarmed doctors who were already unable to care for those injured in the hurricane. Lack of surgical instruments forced doctors to operate with the best instruments available and without using anesthetics.

Adriano Gonzales, a Porto Rican engineer who built water works supplying the city water, headed a party of laborers and mechanics trying to repair the water system. Gonzales hoped to restore running water within 48 hours. Work was also started on repairing the Duarte bridge over the Ozama river, linking the city with the southern part of the island.

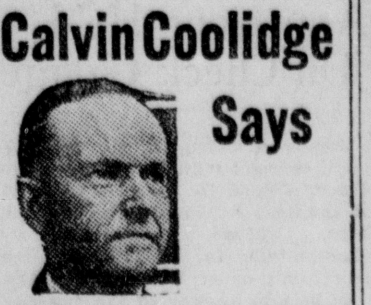

Congestion in hospitals was slightly relieved by the erection of tents. Material for the treatment of gangrene was expected to arrive by airplane today. Tetanus antitoxin was badly needed.

AGED MEN PLEASED WITH PLANE RIDES

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 8.—(UP)—Galusha M. Cole and Dr. Mirza Assad U. Fareed, both 104 years old, liked their first airplane ride, a comparatively short hop over Los Angeles, so well they are considering taking up cross country flying.

"I like to ride in anything, but the airplane is best for long trips," observed Cole after he and his aged friend had been taken on their first ride through the clouds.

"I'd like to fly across the continent now," said Dr. Fareed, who once taught history at the university of Ispahan, Persia.

Calvin Coolidge Says

BY CALVIN COOLIDGE
Former President of the United States
NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Sept. 8.—Up to the present time there has been very little development of a national character in the political campaign. Apparently local issues are engaging most of the public attention. That is inevitable where the candidates are dependent upon state and district favor for their election.

There has been some complaint on one side that the president has been overpraised and on the other side that he has been overcriticized. Supposing both were true it does not mean that there is a normal condition of political activity which is not likely to arouse much public interest.

All elections are important and good government can be secured only by the constantly active and energetic efforts of the voters. But the country ought not to be subjected at the present time to agitation over false issues.

A candid, conscientious, good tempered discussion of public policies is always welcome. But during the next two months the people may well be spared from the virulent type of partisanship and personal abuse.

OVER 350,000 PERSONS SEE STATE'S FAIR

Attendance for Next Year To Highest in History of Big Exhibit

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 8.—(UP)—Officials of the California state fair, which closed here last night, today announced the total attendance at this year's exposition was the second highest in the history of the fair. More than 350,000 visitors passed through the gates during the nine days the fair was in progress.

In the $1,000 drill team contest which featured yesterday's program in honor of California pioneer men and women, the drill team of the Sacramento Elks lodge captured first place and a $500 award.

Second place and $250 went to the San Francisco Elks lodge No. 31, third place and $150 to American Legion auxiliary, Unit 113, Napa, and fourth and $100 to the Sacramento Elks lodge.

In the quadrille contest, the dancing team from Jackson, Amador county, took first place. Woodland was second; Sacramento, third; Stockton, fourth, and Marysville, fifth.

The baby prince, who was christened Baudouin yesterday soon after birth, follows his father in succession to the throne. He is the second child to the royal couple. Their first, Princess Josephine Charlotte, was born October 22, 1927.

The name Baudouin (in English, Baldwin) was given the new heir in memory of King Albert's brother, who died in 1891 while heir presumptive to the Belgian throne.

BODY OF THIRD ANDREE FLIGHT VICTIM FOUND

Steamer Tells of Finding Balloon Relic and Letter, With Skeleton in Ice

TROMSOE, Norway, Sept. 8.—(UP)—The discovery of the body of Knut Fraenkel, third member of the Andree expedition which was lost in an attempt to fly to the north pole by balloon in 1897, was reported here today.

The report came from the Norwegian steamer Isbjorne off White Island, where the bodies of Andree and Strindberg and the relics of their camp were discovered by the crew of the Norwegian sealer Brattvaag. The finding of part of Andree's balloon and part of a letter in what was believed Strindberg's hand writing also was reported.

The Isbjorne's engines were damaged, Gudolf Holmboe, owner of the vessel, said, and its return probably would be delayed. It was uncertain whether the ship would come back to Norway or proceed direct to Stockholm.

The ship was sent to White Island on private initiative and made a thorough search of the locality where the remains of Andree and Strindberg were found. Experts had expressed the belief that Fraenkel perished before his companions reached White Island, probably lost by falling through drift ice.

Apparently the Isbjorne arrived at White Island just before weather conditions made further exploration impossible. It was reported that heavy snows had begun falling in the region, and it was feared that nothing more could be learned of the fate of the three balloonists until the ships were able to land on the island in the spring.

Meanwhile, Tromsoe prepared for the departure of the Swedish gunboat Svensund, which has arrived here to transport the remains of the Andree expedition to Sweden. It was aboard the Svensund that Andree and his companions were taken to the starting point of their fatal flight 33 years ago.

The Swedish commissioner, Professor Hendren, told the United Press that the Svensund sent there to take the bodies of Andree and Strindberg to Stockholm, had been ordered to remain at Tromsoe until the arrival of the steamer Isbjorne.

Reports of the finding of the body of Fraenkel will be investigated and the relics aboard the Isbjorne examined.

Governor Is Struck Down By Reporter

City Police Guard Newspaper Offices During Tuesday Election

NEW ORLEANS, La., Sept. 8.—(UP)—Gov. Huey P. Long was knocked down today by William Wiegand, reporter for the New Orleans Item. Wiegand said he struck Governor Long on the chin when the chief executive "called me a vituperative name."

According to Wiegand, members of the governor's bodyguard held him prisoner for 15 minutes after the incident, and then let him go. Louisiana's tense political situation became dangerously taut as national guardsmen mobilized, apparently on the order of Governor Long, and city police guarded newspaper plants.

Call Out Guard
Although Long declined to comment and officers refused to comment themselves, the move was interpreted as the governor's fulfillment of a promise to insure "fair play" at tomorrow's primary election even if he had to call out the national guard.

Long is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States senator. His opponent is the veteran Sen. Joseph E. Ransdell. Long has been opposed by virtually all the newspapers in the state.

Guardsmen in full uniform began arriving at Jackson barracks last night shortly after a missing witness in the state highway investigation, whom state police were charged with having kidnapped, escaped from a hotel.

Samuel Irby, the missing witness, drew a gun on an elevator operator and escaped shortly after he had spoken over the radio during an hour devoted to Long's campaign. It was the first word the state had heard from Irby in 72 hours.

Apparently of his own volition, he denied that he had been kidnapped by state police. Long, who was speaking over the radio at the time, expressed surprise and told his listeners that Irby had just turned up. He then turned the microphone over to the highway witness.

OFFICERS SLAIN IN TAKING NEGRO

BRUNSWICK, Ga., Sept. 8.—(UP)—A posse this afternoon captured Fred Bryant, Negro, sought after an attempted bank holdup at Darien, Ga., had developed into a running gun fight in which two peace officers were slain.

Bryant's companion, George Grant, captured shortly before noon, was shot to death by a mob that broke into the Darien jail. National guardsmen and deputy sheriffs brought Bryant to the same jail and formed a guard about it. Conditions were reported quiet.

Both men, suspected of being the two who attempted the holdup and participated in the gun fight, were captured in swamps of the Altamaha river delta.

304 APPLICANTS PASS BAR ASSOCIATION EXAMINATIONS

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 8.—(UP)—A total of 304 new attorneys will be added to the roll of the state bar as a result of examinations held by the committee of bar examiners of the state bar of California last August, it was announced today.

Of the entire number who took the examinations—held in San Francisco and Los Angeles—267 or 89 per cent had failed in previous examinations held in this or other states. Of those who had previously failed 52 or only 19.5 per cent passed the present examination.

The class examined in August was the largest ever to be examined in California, being 113 in excess of the number who undertook the tests last year. It was pointed out that no one who passed the written questions received a low enough mark in the oral test to prevent him from being recommended for admission to the bar.

It was interesting to note that 137 of the 682 applicants examined had not had four years of high school or college grade work. Of these 137 only 28 passed.

The supreme court will meet at Los Angeles Monday, September 15, and all successful examinees who desire to be admitted at that time should, it was announced, advise the state bar office at Los Angeles of their intention to present themselves for admission to the bar.

HEATED CONTESTS MARK VOTE AS ARIZONA PREPARES TO GO TO VOTING PLACES ON TUESDAY

PHOENIX, Ariz., Sept. 8.—(UP)—The final offensive of Arizona's political battle front was heard today as candidates made the last speeches of a comparatively quiet campaign.

Tomorrow, approximately 75,000 registered voters are expected to go to the polls and decide the fate of would-be office holders.

Rumblings of the probable outcome of the governor's race were becoming a little more audible, with Andrew Bettwy the center of disturbances. Bettwy made a whirlwind finish of his campaign and was expected to be dangerous in the final tabulations.

Political observers practically conceded three counties—Santa Cruz, Yuma and Mohave—to Bettwy, and they were free in their opinion that he would be a contender in most of the others.

As polling time drew near, George W. P. Hunt, six times governor of the state, seemed favored candidate to win, although forces of Judge Frank H. Lyman were claiming victory for their candidate.

Fred T. Coulter was regarded as a fourth place possibility. Assured of renomination because of no opposition, Governor John C. Phillips, Republican, viewed the race from a grandstand seat.

It is no secret that the Republican forces of the state would like to see Hunt nominated. Phillips scored an outstanding victory over him in the last general election, and should Hunt be nominated, the governor believes he can be re-elected.

Aside from the governor's race, interest was divided on the outcome of the nomination for state auditor and secretary of state. Ana Frohmler, first woman in the United States elected a state auditor, is opposed for re-nomination by Mrs. May Belle Craig, Ouida N. Cox and Eddie Berg.

Scott White, J. B. Weber and Charles R. Price, the present state treasurer, are candidates for the Democratic nomination as secretary of state.

Mit Stumms is opposed for the Democratic nomination as treasurer by W. M. Cox.

Nation Is United Behind Gen. Uriburu As Coup Ousts Old Government

DECLARE HOLIDAY

Irigoyen, Ill and Broken At Army Barracks As Defeat Is Celebrated

BY WILLIAM FOLGER
United Press Staff Correspondent
BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 8.—(UP)—The entire nation stood united today behind Gen. Jose E. Uriburu, whose swift coup d'etat here Saturday completely overthrew the government of President Hipolito Irigoyen.

From every province of the republic came word of the revolution's far-reaching success and widespread rejoicing of the event. No further armed opposition is expected, but the government thoroughly prepared to combat it should any arise.

While the deposed Irigoyen lay ill at an army post in Laplata, celebrations were held in almost every pueblo and city in the land, and pledges of loyalty poured in upon the military leader who took possession of the capital with a promise to "save the institutions and the dignity of a nation."

Today was proclaimed a holiday to honor the swearing in of the new provisional government, a civil cabinet headed by General Uriburu.

Although Irigoyen was guarded heavily at Laplata, he was not a prisoner of the new regime. He received a pledge honoring his liberty before he signed his resignation. Feeble and broken, the octogenarian head of the radical party is confined to bed with grippe, but not with pneumonia, as reported. The rumor that he had suffered a paralytic stroke also was denied by officials. His condition does not appear grave at present, and he is said to be resting well.

The brief clashes between police and the revolutionaries Saturday took about 50 lives and wounded 100, officers said today. Martial law rules the city, but it is mainly to prevent looting by persons taking advantage of the excitement to raid shops and homes. Buenos Aires is tranquil and gives no indication of further fighting.

A few small encounters similar to those in the capital were reported yesterday from the provinces.

But in every case the opposition to the revolutionaries was quickly suppressed.

The provisional governors, who resigned at the request of the junta, will be replaced by army commanders in the area. Civilians later, until new elections are held. The resignations of the governors were made without demur in any case. Demonstrations of loyalty to the new government were made in most of the provincial capitals.

The new government went to work immediately on the problem

Senator Pittman made the announcement after receiving word from Wilbur that he would be present when construction begins on the 22-mile Union Pacific branch line railroad to the dam site.

VOTERS OF MAINE CASTING BALLOTS

PORTLAND, Maine, Sept. 8.—(UP)—Principal interest in today's state election appeared to center around the adage, "as Maine goes, so goes the nation."

Campaigns leading up to the biennial "off-year" balloting left voters unenthusiastic and unexcited, and indications were that the total number of ballots cast would not be great. Skies were overcast this morning but there was no prediction of rain.

There were several interesting contests in sight, despite the fact that political fervor had not been stirred. Democratic leaders of non-military, Republican Maine professed to see a possibility of the minority party capturing several major offices now held by the G. O. P.

Flight Postponed When Stunt Flier Falls Out of Bed

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—(UP)—Al Wilson's takeoff on a cross-country flight in a 1910 model Curtiss pusher biplane was postponed indefinitely today, not because of the hazards involved, but because Wilson fell out of bed during the night and dislocated two vertebrae.

Wilson thrilled visitors at the National Air races this year with his night stunt flying in showers of fireworks and had planned to leave Chicago for Los Angeles during the day.

"I expect to be able to start on my flight on Thursday or Friday," Wilson told the United Press.

morning before he and James Terrell, another highway witness, were taken into custody by state police.

Irby read a prepared statement over the radio in which he said he had called state police to take him to Jefferson parish where the district attorney wished to question him. He said he was released immediately afterward.

Previous to his disappearance, however, Irby had issued a statement to the press saying his life had been threatened, and the Shreveport authorities said he had asked them for protection from the state police.

After Irby's statement Long continued his speech.

"My enemies thought they had me, those newspapers which said I kidnapped Irby," he said. "Now I have it on them." And he laughed into the microphone.

It was after this that Irby made a dash for the freight elevator. When the attendant refused to operate the lift, Irby is alleged to have drawn a gun, and forced him to descend. City police were ordered to arrest Irby on sight, on the technical charges of disturbing the peace and drawing a gun.

Valuables Stolen In Garden Grove

Ninety dollars in cash and valuables worth $160 were stolen from the home of Stephen Diaz who resides two miles west of Garden Grove, on Ocean avenue, Saturday night, according to a report made yesterday to the sheriff's office.

Entrance to the house was made after a screen window had been cut, according to a report made by A. L. Steward, deputy sheriff, who made an investigation.

Aside from the money, Diaz reported that six sacks of flour, two boxes of macaroni and two boxes of spaghetti also were taken.

EVIDENCE LOST AS BOTTLE OF BEER EXPLODES

Constable Jesse Elliott, recently re-elected to that office, was painfully cut about the hands and face this morning when a bottle of beer, confiscated in a raid, blew up as he was taking it from the "litter" room at the county jail to the county hospital for an analysis.

He was taken to Dr. R. A. Cushman, who gave him first aid treatment.

Hunter Leach, county jailer, who was standing near Elliott at the time, was given a bath when the bottle exploded.

Although officers were sure the liquor was potent, there is a law that makes it necessary for it to be analyzed before it can be presented as evidence, but Elliott and Leach had no idea that it was so potent.

The liquor was part of a supply alleged to have been found at the home of Isabel Sunshy, at Stanton, several weeks ago.

of getting the country back to normal. Beds were installed in the government house so that General Uriburu and his colleagues could get periods of much needed rest whenever possible. They remained on duty constantly.

The government was thoroughly prepared to suppress any attempt at counter revolt, although the acclaim given Uriburu throughout the nation indicated that there was little danger.

Theater, cafes and restaurants reopened, lifting the steel, bullet-proof shutters which had been slammed down when fighting started in the streets. General Uriburu's troops, regarded as liberators of the country, paraded through the main streets, preceded by a military band and escorted by civilians who marched arm and arm with the soldiers.

Admiral Hermelo was named chief of police of Buenos Aires and co-operated with military officials in preventing further looting, which seemed to be the city's only big problem. An effort to assault the home of former Chief of Police Santiago was prevented by government forces.

Irigoyen's administration collapsed late Saturday when his few remaining supporters realized that the situation was hopeless. Foreign Minister Cyhanarte persuaded the president after a long and anxious conference that it was best for him to leave the capital. Accompanied by the foreign minister, his personal physician, Dr. Meabe, and his personal bodyguard, Leopoldo Flores, Irigoyen was placed in Oyhantarte's automobile, feverish and trembling, and driven to La Platte.

The party went to the government house in La Platte, but no officials were present to receive them. They went to the Seventh infantry headquarters where Irigoyen presented his resignation.

BIG HOTEL MAY BE ERECTED IN SAN CLEMENTE

SANTA ANA, Sept. 8.—Edward Fowler, of Pasadena, has taken an option on the hotel site here. The site, comprising 12 acres, faces the beach. It is Fowler's plan to erect a $1,000,000. The proposed hotel will comprise a large central building with a number of fine bungalows, this being the present modern type of hotel building. The option becomes void if the construction of the hotel does not start within four months, according to Ole Hanson, who announced the completion of the deal with Fowler.

Fowler during the past few years has been engaged in building Spanish type residences in Pasadena, and is now at work on important plans for buildings in Southern California. During all this time Fowler has spent much time in San Clemente and has made a study of the Spanish village as a beach hotel center for the Southern part of the state.

DEATHS

A WORD OF COMFORT

Surely a God, who created man with an instinct to finish his work, and to complete what he must have as a law of his being, will perfect what he begins.

It is unthinkable that such a God would be content to cast aside the work of his hands, the characters to which he has given life, and leave them to rot in the earth. Our own consciousness, derived from His, makes inevitable the concept of a life beyond the grave. You may be sure your dear one lives and joyously waits for you.

SERVICE CLUBS SEEK TO DEFER WILLARD SALE

A committee composed of Mac O. Robbins, J. P. Baumgartner and Fred Forgy, representing the luncheon clubs of Santa Ana, will meet with the city council tonight, to request that body to join with them in asking the Santa Ana board of education to withhold sale of the Frances Willard junior high school property, scheduled for tomorrow afternoon.

Bids are scheduled to be opened by the board of education tomorrow and the luncheon clubs are desirous of holding the property for a bond issue to raise money at the present time, until money can be made for the purchase of the site for a civic center.

The committee will tell the city council that if the school board will turn down all bids at its meeting tomorrow afternoon, this action will give the people of Santa Ana a chance to voice their opinion in the matter in an election which could be held within six weeks, and the committee will ask that the council be represented with them when they appear before the school board at the meeting set for 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

The action tonight is the result of endorsements of three Santa Ana luncheon clubs of a plan to reserve the property for a civic center, the clubs feeling that if the property fell into the hands of individuals, that it never again could be available for a civic center site.

A resolution of intention, which proposes the widening of Flower street to 55 feet from Seventeenth street, south to Washington street, and the opening of the avenue between Fifth and Sixth streets together with the straightening of it at First street, is ready to be passed by the board tonight and may come up for consideration, it was reported.

SCHOOL TO OPERATE OFFICE MACHINERY

The operation of electric office machinery will be included in junior college commerce courses this year, it was announced today. The school is particularly fortunate in having at hand several of the better types of office machines which are available for instruction purposes, according to George B. Holmes, head of the commercial department.

"These machines include the new electrically driven Moon-Hopkins bookkeeping machine which was recently purchased by the board of education. A limited number of students will be trained as operators upon this machine," Holmes said.

"Besides the Moon-Hopkins machine this department also possesses electric bank posting machines, electric calculators, and electric mimeographs.

"Students desiring business training of any type should arrange to enroll in one of the following courses: One-year practical secretarial training course, two-year practical secretarial business training course, two-year general business training course, and one semester electric bookkeeping machine course.

"These courses will be given with the aim in mind of ultimate employment. The courses will be thorough, well planned, and practical. No charge for tuition is made for any courses offered by the college."

TWO JAILED AFTER EL MODENA FIGHT

Charged with assault with a deadly weapon, Benito Cabrera and Fernando Avales of El Modena, were in the county jail today as the result of a fight in which a three-pound stone, an iron bar and a whiskey bottle were used.

Cabrera and Avales, according to Constable George Bartley, entered the home of Aurelio Lopez in El Modena last night in a search for beer. Lopez and a cousin, Marcel Ledesma, happened there shortly afterward. In the battle that followed, Ledesma suffered serious cuts about the face and head.

The accused men were brought before Judge G. W. Ingle in Orange this morning. Their preliminary hearing was set for next Saturday at 10:30 o'clock. Bail was set at $2000.

MAN DISCOVERS COMFORT OF BARE LEGS AND PLUS-FOURS

What! Bare legs for men too? Santa Ana, like all other American cities and towns, has long since grown accustomed to the bared nether extremities of the fair sex, and has accepted the display of pretty, tanned and rounded legs as a common-place thing in the daily life of the community.

The day has passed forever, when women's feet were necessary appliances for locomotion, which were simply attached to the bottoms of voluminous skirts, with apparently no support for their weight beyond that offered by the draperies.

But somehow, it has always been taken for granted that men had exceedingly sturdy and reliable legs from which their feet were swung. How could one doubt it, with the prevalence of plus-fours? However, those legs were always carefully and fully draped with heavy knitted golf hose except on the bathing beaches, and in such remote spots as the tropics where khaki shorts and woolen socks left an exposure of bony masculine knee open to the searching light of day.

But today, the bared masculine legs made its appearance on the streets of Santa Ana, naked and unshamed. One of the prominent young men of the city was glimpsed swinging down Fourth street, wearing comfortable looking plus-fours and sports oxfords, and his legs as bare as the day he entered the world—except for the hirsute adornment with which mother nature had obligingly outfitted him.

Will his example be followed by others, or will he, brave soul, be compelled to stride alone, bare-legged and comfortable? It remains as someone pithily remarked, to be seen.

East Fourth street, was arrested at Fourth and French streets; Jack Riddle, 32, of 1807 West Eighth street; C. Mata, 33, of Redlands was arrested at 1815 West Eighth street; Ernest Gracian, of 704 South B. street, Tustin, was arrested on East Fourth street; Dave Romo, 41, was arrested on Garfield street, between Second and Third streets; D. M. Pettit, 37, of 208 East Sixteenth street, was arrested at Fifth and Garney streets, and Don Sherfy, 22, was arrested at 707 North Main street.

Sheriff's officers today were investigating the burglary of the Farmers and Merchants Exchange club at Los Alamitos, Saturday night. A brace, 12 bits and two pool cues were reported stolen.

W. W. Berry, of Santa Ana, route No. 3, reported the theft of his automobile while under the influence of liquor. He was released several hours later on bail of $250.

Ernest Gracian, who was arrested on a drunk charge also is to be charged with petty theft. It was reported. He is alleged to have seen Nick Pappas drop a $10 bill and to have hurriedly picked it up and run.

L. Ernest, proprietor of a billiard hall at 310 1-2 North Broadway, has requested members of the police force to visit his place of business at times. He reported that occasionally undesirable characters came into his place of business and intimidated that he wanted the police to meet them.

DIVORCE CASES FLOOD COUNTY CLERK'S FILES

An unusual run of divorce cases has flooded the office of County Clerk J. M. Backs since Thursday morning, with the 11th straight divorce action being filed today. All the civil actions filed in the court since Thursday have been divorce complaints.

The case today was filed by Nora K. Stromer against Arthur G. Stromer, in which charges of desertion and failure to provide are set forth. The couple was married in Viborg, South Dakota, in 1911, and separated August 3, 1929.

Three complaints were filed Saturday. Edith D. Chabo sued Edward W. Chabo, charging desertion, habitual intemperance and failure to provide. Cruelty was the basis of the action filed by Frank Morris against Alice M. Morris. He alleged that on one occasion she burned his trunk and clothing and on another occasion pursued him and fired two shots at him from a pistol.

Alvin H. Bauer set up in his complaint the facts that he weighs only 128 pounds while his wife, Rosa Pohl Bauer, weighs 180 pounds, and that she has threatened him with physical violence and on occasion has struck him with her fist, making it necessary for him to escape from the room. Cruel and inhuman treatment is the formal charge on which he seeks the divorce decree.

Boys Flocking To Y. M. C. A. Plunge

Boys are flocking to the Y. M. C. A. in great numbers these days just before school opens. It is reported by Ralph C. Smedley, secretary, to take advantage of the re-opening of the pool. The scene of much of the fun of the boys at the Y has been closed all summer as a co-operative measure in the fight against infantile paralysis.

Changes Plea On Weapon Carrying

Daniel Valle, who previously had entered a plea of guilty to a charge of possession of a deadly weapon by an alien, appeared before Judge James L. Allen in superior court today, withdrew the plea and substituted a plea of not guilty. Valle had been scheduled to appear today for pronouncement of judgment after the court had held Friday at a probation hearing that the offense was not subject to probation. The trial was set for September 12.

Choose Wrong Place To Shoot Doves

Shooting doves in the wrong places caused the arrest of two men yesterday, who were cited to appear in court here within the next few days.

The arrests were made by Deputy Sheriff R. E. Reed, of the Irvine ranch.

H. H. Ireland of Long Beach, was arrested in the Santiago canyon on a charge of shooting on the highway within three miles of a national forest, and T. H. Wilson of Long Beach, was arrested on a charge of shooting doves in a closed area.

MYSTERY OF YAWL REMAINS UNSOLVED

The mystery of how B. C. Huber's yawl got away from its moorings in Redondo Beach and then ended up on the beach at Dana Point was puzzling Huber and marine authorities today.

Huber, a former Newport Beach resident, has a home at Redondo Beach and keeps his yawl there. The yawl was discovered on the beach at Dana Point late Friday night.

A salvage crew employed by an insurance company worked all day Sunday in an effort to get the yawl back into deep water. The pilot house was torn out by heavy swells Friday night.

Police think that rum runners stole the yawl and used it to land a cargo of liquor. Another theory is that the craft was taken by an experienced boatman for a joy ride.

MRS. RICHTER DIES IN NEWPORT HOME

Mrs. Conrad Richter, 71, passed away at her home on Bay Island, Newport Beach this morning, following a lingering illness. The body is at the Smith and Tutthill parlors in Santa Ana.

Mrs. Richter, a resident of the harbor district for the past 12 years, had resided in the Southland for many years. She was credited with having organized the playground movement in Los Angeles, over 50 years ago.

Besides her husband, a Newport physician, she is survived by one son, William Glasell, and one daughter, Mrs. Clarence Somers of Los Angeles.

MAIL CARRIERS TO REPORT ON LETTER BOXES

Following an instruction from post office headquarters in Washington, D. C., the Santa Ana post office today is starting measures to better the condition of mail receptacles in this city.

Carriers are to make a report showing the location of every mail box that is liable to cut a carrier's hand when mail is being deposited or that by reason of its small size or any other reason gives difficulty in delivery.

Patrons are to be served with a request to discard the old receptacle and get a new one, or, according to Postmaster T. E. Stephenson, better yet have a slot at least one and one-half inches by eight inches cut in the door.

"The post office department," said the postmaster, "urges the installation of the door-slots, especially in new office buildings and new residences. Most door slots are too small for easy use. At the ordinary residence, where slots are not provided, the very best mail box is a wooden box large enough to receive papers and magazines as well as letters."

"C. C. Langley, foreman of carriers, suggests a box open at the top three by eight inches or four by six inches. All mail boxes should be placed where a carrier can readily reach them and where a substitute new on the route can readily locate them."

REPORT NEW CASES OF INFANT MALADY

Just as the last case of infantile paralysis in the county was released from quarantine yesterday, two more developed, with a third patient under observation. County health authorities had been hopeful of Margaret Reinhaus, the run would be ended. The Reinhaus child had been stricken on August 17 and was the 35th victim of the disease.

The new patients, who are under quarantine at the Orange County hospital, are Noll Harris, 6, of Garden Grove, who was quarantined yesterday, and Helen Enos, 18, of Fullerton, who went in quarantine today. A third patient, also from Garden Grove, is under observation at the hospital. The Harris child is the first case from Garden Grove.

Recalls Landing 30 Years Ago At Newport Harbor

Over 30 years ago, back in the days when horses were horses and paved roads were unknown, Frank Rogers, of Escondido, who is visiting in Santa Ana, landed at Newport harbor after a steamer trip from San Francisco.

After getting off the boat, Rogers came to Tustin city by rail, and then to Santa Ana by wagon over roads with dust many inches thick. Santa Ana was only a skeleton of a town compared to the present city of 1930, Rogers declared today, while visiting in the home of his niece, Mrs. W. C. Dunlap, 2143 North Main street.

Mr. and Mrs. Rogers arrived in Santa Ana last week for a short visit and are making their residence in the Leek court on North Broadway. Rogers has traveled up and down the Pacific coast six times but landed only once at Newport harbor.

BIG AND LITTLE OF BOXING

If you need more than one guess to name Primo Carnera in the photo above, there's something wrong, somewhere. This mock bout was posed by Carnera and Fidel LaBarba, featherweight championship contender from the Pacific Coast. Primo and Fidel first met in Paris a year ago. LaBarba is 16 inches shorter than Primo and 140 pounds lighter.

WEST WINDS

Here and There in Local Sport

By EDDIE WEST

I've been wondering whether Promoter Henry T. Foust's decision to padlock his Orange County Athletic club during the month of September isn't the beginning of the end for boxing here. I guess there is no law against wondering.

Ostensibly, the matchmaker closes the doors of his Orange County Athletic club for business reasons only. Nevertheless, the future looks almost as foggy as the present. Of course, there may be a silver lining somewhere. September is one of the worst months in boxing. It is almost as bad as December, the holiday period, when everyone, even the hard-hearted fight fan, is Christ-mas-minded.

Foust hopes that a "vacation" will refresh and invigorate the cash customers, and bring them out in larger numbers through the fall.

That is the chief reason he shuts up shop.

Another is that the promoter desires to make a trip to see his father who is seriously ill in Terre Haute, Ind. He will charter a plane east.

Foust has labored earnestly, honestly, almost desperately—to give the fans a run for their money here.

In the two years he has operated on the southside—it will be exactly two years, September 15—there never has been a taint of suspicion about the conduct of his business.

Any sports writer in Southern California will tell you Foust's matchmaking has been better than that anywhere else. Week in and week out, we have had better, closer, hotter bouts than any other club.

Foust's matches have been on a level. He enjoys the respect and good will of all—bankers, business men, laborers and loafers. He even has gotten along on the finest terms with the newspapermen, and that is saying something. Most members of the fourth estate eye the fight game a little suspiciously. But Foust, in there trying and paying his bills and co-operating to the fullest extent, won the admiration of the writers. They "played ball" with him.

So poor old Foust isn't to blame for the downfall of boxing. The good Henry believes "conditions" are responsible. Men are out of employment. The stock market crash may have hurt.

In my opinion, 75 per cent of those directly or indirectly connected with the game are con-men, chiselers, crooks. They "angle" for the best of it in every transaction—at the expense of the public.

The 25 per cent that is honest, responsible and conscientious—fellows like Foust and Jack Doyle and Jim Woods and George Blake and Lt. Jack Kennedy—are outnumbered.

In the implicit trust they have in their fellow man, most of them are blind to the artifices used by the chiselers with whom they do business.

These men are trying desperately to save a game they know they are too good and too big to be connected with.

The "sport" isn't good enough for them.

They are only wasting time and throwing money away.

I doubt whether the lousy racket is WORTH saving.

The result is a free, sweeping

Cook Dubious About Grid Prospects

LINESMEN ARE NEEDED IN DON FOOTBALL CAMP

Coach Bill Cook, football coach at Santa Ana junior college to-night will feel something like Admiral Richard E. Byrd did after the first day of the journey to the South pole—hopeful for success but fearful of what may happen.

Coach Cook is hoping for another junior college grid crown, and whether he fears what might happen between now and Thanksgiving Day is his own business.

Compared to this time last year, however, Don prospects are in much better circumstances. On the opening day in 1929, only six lettermen were eligible yet Cook steered these and some recruits right through a long hard season to a conference title and a playoff for the state crown, which Santa Ana lost to Sacramento, 12 to 6.

This season there are 12 lettermen eligible, but whether Cook can get the whole dozen to enroll is a different story.

Backs Are Experienced

Last year, the line was composed of veterans from end to end. This fall the backfield boasts the lettermen. Nine linemen graduated in June, another entered Oregon State and another was declared ineligible, leaving Captain Al Kluthe, center, Hal Dunham, end, and Philip Martin, guard, the sole experienced survivors. Ed Adams went to O. S. C. while Tim Wallace, big tackle, is ineligible. In the backfield, however, there will be Wayne Garlock, Charles Anderson, Melvin Beatty, John Keeler, Leonard Natland, Gene Olson, Franklin Van Meter, Orville Schuchardt and possibly Carol Bertollet, all lettermen.

Fortunately for Cook, Orange county high schools will be generous with their graduates and the Don ranks will be replenished by athletes from Santa Ana, Anaheim and Orange, Garden Grove, Huntington Beach, Tustin, San Juan Capistrano and elsewhere.

Coach Cook, Captain Al Kluthe and Herald Hyllton, captain of last year's team, are sending over every graduating member of the team last year with the exception of Donald Baum, star tackle, who entered Redlands.

More Candidates Expected

The initial turnout today was not expected to be as large as it will be in several days as many of the gridlers are still working. Most of the yearlings will be on hand Thursday for the first of "Freshman Days" and everyone should be signed up soon after the first of next week, when registration and classes start.

Santa Ana has five home contests in succession, starting September 20, playing practice jousts with Chaffey junior college, U. S. C. freshmen and Menlo Park junior college and league games with Long Beach and Compton.

Last year, the Dons pulled an upset by holding the Trojan yearlings to a scoreless tie in the Coliseum. Later the Frosh beat the Stanford and California peagreeners.

Landis Calls Meet To Discuss Series

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—Representatives of the six clubs still having a mathematical chance to win the American and National league pennants met today with Commissioner K. M. Landis, to make preliminary preparations for the 1930 world series.

The series will open this year in the American league city, either Philadelphia or Washington, and after two games will move to the home of the successful National league club for three games. If additional games are necessary they will be played in the American league park.

Even to par, Curry won match play. B. Z. McKinney and F. E. Farnsworth were three down and Ed Holmes and L. W. Bemis four down.

Kozeluh Beats Richards

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—Karel Kozeluh of Czechoslovakia, world's professional tennis champion, defeated Vincent Richards, second ranking professional, in an exhibition match yesterday, 6-3, 6-1, 6-3. It was the worst defeat Kozeluh ever handed Richards.

HELPS PURDUE

Purdue's football coaching staff is rounded out now and ready to begin the business of defending the Big Ten championship. The acceptance of Christy Flanagan, below, to assist in the development of the ball carriers, completes the varsity coaching roster. Flanagan was the state ball totter of the Notre Dame elevens of 1925, '26, '27.

DENY CARNERA BAN IN STATE TO BE LIFTED

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 8.—(INS)—Primo Carnera, 274-pound Italian heavyweight, will not be reinstated in California.

So far as the California Athletic commission is concerned, the ban put on Carnera following an alleged "framed" boxing match in Oakland with Leon ("Bombo") Chevallier several months ago, will never be lifted.

This was the emphatic declaration here today of Charles F. Traugott, member of the commission, following reports from several sources that the California boxing today was to rescind its suspension of the Italian.

"Tremendous pressure has been brought on us to have Carnera reinstated in California—so that he might box in other states where boxing commissions barred him after the Oakland 'frame-up,'" said Traugott.

"But I believe I speak authoritatively for Commissioners Woods and Hanlon, the other two members of the commission, when I say that under no circumstances will the Italian boxer be reinstated by us."

Reports that the athletic commission was to lift the ban on Carnera started several days ago, following a hurried trip to San Francisco from New York of Jeff Dickson, British boxing promoter and personal friend of Commissioner Traugott. Dickson owns a 25 per cent interest in Carnera's management.

CLAIM BRITISH ECONOMY CAUSE FOR POLO ROUT

BY DAVIS J. WALSH
(I. N. S. Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—Having taken a heating Saturday and being ordained for another, either on Wednesday or the following week-end, Great Britain today was faced with the disquieting realization that not only is its polo inferior to that of America, which is pardonable, but also its thinking, which isn't.

The British team that lost by 10 to 5 in Saturday's opening match of the three-game series obviously was a pre-determined loser and it seems to me that this state of affairs was brought about in its own dressing room.

In fact, there would seem to be no question now that Charles H. Tremayne, England's non-playing captain, arrived previously on the side of economy when he arranged the details of this invasion.

He brought over a tremendous stable of ponies, said to be the finest in the world. But he didn't bring enough men to ride them. Of course I'm only a young fellow and haven't been around much but I have yet to see a pony climb on a player's back and score the winning goal.

So, with only the absolute minimum of four players available on Saturday, the British debacle was surprising only in the fact that it wasn't worse.

The answer? Offhand, I would say that it might be that the British would have a real chance if they had the ordinary run-of-the-mine gumption to bring over enough polo players to make up a polo team.

Six men arrived in this country some weeks ago.

Two of them, Captain George and Aidan Roark, were taken ill. Both were No. 1 players in consequence of which Gerald Baiding, the regular No. 2, is playing No. 1. Humphrey Guinness, the alternate No. 3, is playing back, and Lewis Lacey, the greatest back in polo, is playing No. 2. Only Pat Roark at No. 3 is operating in the position of his choice.

I don't attempt to say that, with the strongest combination they possibly could muster, the British might win this series. What with Earle Hopping entering the match largely on Saturday and remaining in it to steal the show almost entirely, the combination of Pedley, Hopping, Hitchcock and Guest is practically foolproof. But I do maintain that this would be a bitter, die-hard series—probably a three game series—if the British had no more than an adequate No. 1 man available so that they could arrange their lineup to its best possible advantage.

Tilden will meet Joseph J. Armstrong of St. Paul, on one of the field courts and the Bell-Mercer match likewise will be played outside the stadium.

BERKELEY BELL SENSATION OF TENNIS WORLD

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 8.—Berkeley Bell may be only a Johnny Goodman of tennis but with the men's national singles championship Barley begun, he already has edged his way into a spotlight that was supposed to shine only on "Big Bill" Tilden.

Bell, conqueror of Jean Borotra in the first round Saturday, faced another difficult match today, with Fritz Mercer, of Bethlehem, Pa. The Texas player, who was not considered highly enough by the tournament committee on the strength of his season's record to be "seeded," is now one of the most feared players in the upper half of the draw.

The Austin star's victory over Borotra was gained largely on the strength of his services. His speedy first ball found the forecourt too frequently for the Basque's liking and the second ball was driven with enough force to put Borotra at a disadvantage in the ensuing volleys.

In other respects, however, Bell profited more from his opponent's errors than his own skill. His driving game or play at the net scarcely seems to equal that of a number of other youngsters who are seeking to disturb Tilden's quest for his eighth national championship, which, if successful, will make new tennis history.

On the results of today's matches it should be possible to gauge the strength of many of Tilden's prospective opponents. The encounters scheduled for the stadium courts follow:

Bryant Grant, Jr., Atlanta, vs. David Jones, New York; George Lott, Chicago, vs. Norris Williams, Philadelphia; H. G. N. Lee, England, vs. Alphonso Smith, Baltimore; Junior Coen, Kansas City, vs. Gilbert Hall, South Orange, N. J.; John Doeg, Santa Monica, Calif., vs. W. Barry Wood, Jr., Kilton, Mass.

Tilden will meet Joseph J. Armstrong of St. Paul, on one of the field courts and the Bell-Mercer match likewise will be played outside the stadium.

LULL IN MAJOR LEAGUE RACES: TEAMS TRAVEL

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—There was a brief lull in the two major league pennant races today as the clubs shifted for the final inter-sectional games of the 1930 season.

All American league clubs were idle today, while a double-header between Brooklyn and the Phillies was the only National league activity.

Beginning tomorrow the western clubs in the National league will open their final tour of the East and the eastern teams in the American league will commence their farewell swing through the West.

Riding high and handsome on a seven-game winning streak, the St. Louis Cardinals were snapping at the heels of the slipping Chicago Cubs to stay in the National league race. A double victory over Cincinnati Sunday, 11-6 and 4-2, elevated the Cardinals to within two and one-half games of the Cubs.

The Cubs couldn't hold a 6-3 lead, going into the seventh inning and Pittsburgh handed Chicago its sixth defeat in the last nine games played by the league leaders, 9-7.

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Sept. 8.—Alvin Koenig, state interscholastic 100 yard sprint champion last year and runner-up in the 220 yard title race, left yesterday for the University of Southern California where he will attend college.

John Hill, broad jumper at the university and Garret Arbelbide, famous end on the football team and candidate for the All-American this year, came to Huntington Beach in Arbelbide's car and drove Koenig to the Kappa Sigma fraternity house.

Frank Wykoff received injuries to his leg and arm as he out of the running next year. Koenig, being a freshman, can not compete in varsity track events in 1931, but will be the hope of the Southern California university for the next three years. Koenig is a product of the Huntington Beach elementary school and high school.

GAME MAY BE TURNING POINT IN BIG SERIES

Night baseball's "little world series" between Santa Ana and Colton may reach the turning point tonight when the Stars, two to one ahead in games, invade the little railroad city.

If Herb Salvason's merry-men can now down the American Night league baseball champions once more, securing a two-game advantage and making it imperative for Colton to take the next three contests in rapid succession, then the big playoff will be near an end. The Stars are just not losing three games in a row these days.

Naturally Colton will give Santa Ana "the works." But the pressure will be on the Reds rather than the Stars and Salvason's well-gear machine looks like an even bet despite the fact that it will be gambling amid strange surroundings and with a smaller, lighter and "livelier" sphere.

Venn Botts, the star young pitcher whose feet compare favorably in length with Carnera's, has been assigned to even the series for Colton. Santa Ana hasn't scored an earned run off Botts in 21 innings.

Joe Cornelius will toil for Santa Ana again. If he wins, Manager Salvason plans to give Ray Price his long awaited chance at the enemy here Wednesday night. It is understood.

The lineup that won for Santa Ana the National Night league championship will be intact, "Rosy" Merrill, ailing outfielder, having recovered from the attack of tonsillitis that kept him out of both games last week.

Merrill is scheduled to start in right field with Leavitt Daley returning to second base.

Davidin ("Scotty") Scott, unexpectedly rushed to a strange position in the warm-up part of the playoff, played a brilliant game and delivered a hit that started Colton on its road to ruin Friday. Salvason hates to send him back to the dugouts, and at the last minute may decide to keep Scott in the lineup. Managers always hesitate to break up a winning combination.

It is a real problem for Salvason because Merrill, second ranking Santa Ana batsman, is known as a great "money player" in that he always is most dangerous in important games.

Colton probably will go back to its regular lineup, too. Manager Hubert Findlay shook up his order Friday, putting Ewers in right field and Sorenson behind the pan, but Noriega is likely to be in the outfield and Bob Stone back of the log to catch Bott's fast ones.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 8.—Newsboy Brown, veteran Los Angeles flyweight, today agreed to serve as an alternate in the Midget Wolgast-Frankie Genaro title match in Madison Square Garden, New York, October 17.

CHAPTER 33

Peter sat facing the high rail which divided the prison inmates from their visitors. There was a hubbub of voices around him, yet the hubbub created a privacy as real as solitude, for each of the pairs leaning forward close to the barrier from opposite sides was oblivious of all the others.

To each of them the drone of conversation that filled the room was only an indeterminate humming accompanied for the one conversation that mattered—their own.

Peter had already started from the hospital toward the San Quentin ferry when he swung Bossy sharply around and returned to the Herald office instead. He found Andrews in the dark room, developing prints.

"I believe you're going to turn out useful for once," Peter greeted him. "Remember that picture you took of Morrison on the Hangtown story?"

"Sure I do. Didn't I have to take him in his coffin, because the undertaker wouldn't be persuaded to let me set him up proper? I should think I would remember. The art department gave me the dickens for the work they had in dressing it up so that we could get it. After all the work I had getting permission to take it at all! They only used it for a half column inset—can you beat that?"

"Well, it's going to come in handy now," Peter consoled him. "I wish you'd fix me up a couple of prints—one from your own plate, just as you took it, and another one the way the art department brought it to life. Can I have them in twenty minutes or so?"

"Surest thing you know! There's nothing I like better than being interrupted in the middle of a job and being asked to hunt up some plates that are close to a month old!"

"Thanks."

Andrew's tone had been anything but enthusiastic, and when Peter left him he was still moving wet prints slowly back and forth in a shallow tray of solution—but Peter knew that when he came back, the camera man, still grumbling, would hand him the pictures he had asked for.

Emerging from the dark room, Peter strolled over to Lammie's desk. The "D" edition was already out, and Lammie was engaged in nothing more exigent than the drawing of caricatures of various members of the Herald staff on a sheet of copy paper. Peter leaned over his shoulder, and under pretense of viewing the drawings, spoke in a low tone, inaudible to the man at the neighboring desks.

"I say, Lammie," he murmured, "you remember that ring you pawned at Izzy's?"

"I'm not likely to forget it. I thought you'd got me into one hell of a jam."

"I thought maybe I had, myself," Peter admitted. "How much did Izzy lend you on it, by the way?"

"Ten bucks."

"Well, I'll tell you what I wish you'd do. Give me the ticket and let me get it out of hook, and take the ring. It's worth a lot more than ten dollars, but on the other hand it is stolen property and when this thing breaks you won't be allowed to keep it anyway."

Lammie squinted across the room at Jimmy, and with a single swinging curved line added an exaggeratedly tilted eyeshade to the drawing before him.

"I never want to see the damn thing again," he said without looking up.

"I'm sorry you got dragged into it," Peter apologized with awkward sympathy.

"Oh, I'm not sore at you," Lammie's head was bent low as he opened the drawer of his desk and fished out the pawn ticket from among its miscellaneous contents.

"In a way, I'm grateful. I'm on the wagon, Peter—for keeps," he added gruffly. The pawn ticket was in his hand, but he still pretended to fumble among the papers in the drawer. "Jimmy's too damn decent. You gave me the scare of my life, and I guess it knocked some sense into me. I'd give you the ring for nothing, if I had the money to get it out of hook."

"That's all right—it isn't my own money," Peter assured him blithely. "I'm just lucky that Izzy didn't put you wise to the fact that those emeralds are real and give you more for it."

A half hour later Peter was on his way to San Quentin, the ring in his pocket and the still damp photographic prints carefully wrapped in paper on the seat beside him. Not even the prison gardens, with their glaring, incongruous beauty, succeeded in dressing his spirits. Callahan was already in for a long term, and he would have no reason for refusing to talk, especially since Peter came from Fitzgerald's description.

Despite Fitzgerald's description

Peter was unprepared for the stunted, narrow-chested figure in a prison uniform several sizes too large for him, who came forward to a seat on the prisoner's side of the barrier. Callahan's coloring was the dusty blonde type whose skin always looks faintly grayish. The short prison hair-cut made his features even more wizened than nature, augmented by continuous undernourishment in childhood, had created them. Even an eye less experienced than Peter's would have placed Callahan as one of society's congenial misfits.

"Sunk before he started," Peter inwardly commented.

Neither viciousness nor adventure, ambition nor despair, had made Callahan an outlaw. He was a criminal because it had never occurred to him to be anything else. He scraped a precarious and dangerous living, punctuated by periods in prison only a degree more dismal than the periods outside it, because he knew of nothing else to do.

"Mr. Fitzgerald wants as I should help you. I don't know how I can help anybody, but Mr. Fitzgerald was good to my misuses, and what he says, goes," Callahan said as he dropped into his seat.

"If you can clean on what I ask you, neither Mr. Fitzgerald nor I will forget it, when you come up before the prison board."

"I ain't strikin' no bargain with you," the man's voice, thin and reedy, had yet a curious, hopeless dignity. "The prison board will give me the book, and I know it. But I owe Mr. Fitzgerald suthin', an' if your friend o' his, that's enough. Spit it!"

Peter drew the ring from his pocket and held it up where Callahan could see it, cupped in his hand.

"I only want to know where you got this," he said.

"You wouldn't believe it if I told you!" Callahan's voice had the dull certitude of one to whom the accusation of lying had long ceased to be an insult.

"What's more, I was scared to turn it over to a fence when it happened, and when I got that safety box, I stuck it in, not knowing what else to do with it. I'd plumb forgot it was there, until Mr. Fitzgerald showed up with it. It was the Liberty Bond I meant he should take."

Peter opened his mouth to speak, and closed it again. It was inconceivable that Callahan was telling the truth when he said that he had forgotten the ring, but Peter decided to hear the rest of his story. It would then be easy enough to point out its discrepancies. Callahan hadn't the imagination to lie cleverly—but why had he begun by saying he did not expect to be believed, and added the statement, silly on its very surface, that he had forgotten a ring obtained a month or so ago, which by his own showing, he had been afraid to dispose of? Peter's eyebrows were fitted almost to the margin of his overhanging black forelock, but if Callahan wanted to spin a fairytale—well, there were times when men's fairytales were more illuminating than their most literal utterances.

"I'm listening," he said in a voice which betrayed nothing of his incredulity.

"I wouldn't do this for nobody but Mr. Fitzgerald. Say, did you know he hunted around till he got my misuses a job—one where she can keep the kid with her? I'd go to the chair for that guy. Honest to Jeez, I would! Maybe they can send me there yet, if I tell you. But I didn't croak him."

If Callahan had protested his innocence with a solemn oath, Peter's eyebrows would have continued to tilt upward. But there was something in his emboldened statement which carried conviction. Besides, Fitzgerald had said that he wasn't a killer.

"I believe you," Peter said with a quiet sincerity which gave an unaccustomed sense of confidence to the man on the prison side of the barrier.

"Then I'll tell you how it was. I was hardly more than a kid—hadn't even done a job on my own yet. Maybe you've heard as how I always work in the open—no second story stuff. This is why, I was goin' along the street, along about half past one o'clock in the morning, when I happened to notice a place set 'way back from the road. There was a high hedge around it, and plenty of shrubbery for cover. A place like that was just askin' for it. I took a look at the house. One room was lighted, and the long window was open. It was a big room with a lot of furniture in it, but nobody was there."

"I'd been workin' for Saw-Tooth Mike, y' understand. Maybe you heard of him. He got his, later, when he broke into a house down the peninsula, belongin' to the amateur heavy-weight champ of the Pacific Coast. He just rose up out a bed and swatted Mike one in the jaw that laid him out cold. He said he never meant to hit so hard, but he got excited and hadn't time to think. And would you believe it, that there millionaire sportsman, he fixed it so Mike's widow and kids would never come to want, I'll say he was a sportsman!"

"I remember the case," Peter said. "But what about you and this room you were telling about?"

"Well, I wanted to make good with Mike, see? So I thought here was a chance to show my stuff. When I looked around, I seen somebody was in the room, after all, a-lyin' in the shadow of the table. I thought he was soused. I got his wallet with seven hundred dollars in it, without his steerin'. Then I seen this ring, and I eased it off his finger. I was goin' after his watch next but there was some-thing kinda funny. I'll say it was funny! You couldn't knock me over with a feather when I got wise. No wonder I'd got the stuff in his pockets without wakin' him up. He was stiff!"

"Let me get this straight," Peter said levelly. "You walked in on this man when he was already dead, and robbed him. Is that it?"

Callahan rubbed the rough prison sleeve across his forehead.

"It makes me sweat even now to think of it," he said. "The room got to seemin' awful still and empty of a sudden, and the tickin' of a clock on the mantel was so loud an' slow, it made me prick all over, as if I was comin' out with poison oak. I was only a kid, y' understand. There was just me an' the dead man on the floor—and the clock, that seemed alive."

"I couldn't get my legs to go!" for a minute. Seemed like they'd turned to wood. Then the clock began to whirl, gettin' ready to strike. It seemed like I just could not bear it to hear that clock strike, there in the room with the dead man, lookin' on, the way it musta looked on when the guy came in that killed him. If I heard it strike, I knew I'd yell—I'd go plumb crazy."

"I hit my forehead a nasty crack on the side of the window, gettin' out, because I didn't look where I was goin'. But I didn't even notice the bump till it swelled up next day. I just ran—faster than I ever ran when the cops was after me. Maybe you've heard I ain't no killer. That's why. Seems like I never got over it, bein' just a kid and all. An' I was never no good at second story work after that. I tried it once or twice, but every time I'd get into a house in the dark, I'd think I was goin' to stumble over a stiff, and the sound of a clock tickin' would send me plumb loco."

Callahan sank back. His blue prison shirt rose and fell with his shallow, panting breaths as he lived ed once again the scene he had been describing.

Peter leaned over the railing, peering at Callahan's white and shaken face.

"But you've got a record reachin' back ten or twelve years. This can't have happened recently." In a story bristling with stark impossibilities, he seized on the one that came uppermost.

"No, it was more than ten years ago," Callahan answered dully. "When I got back to Mike and told him what had happened, he bawled me out proper. He told me I'd swing for that stiff's murder. I wouldn't have a chance, I'd already been in reform school, and had a record, even then. I'd broken into the house—leastwise, they'd call it breaking. Not a jury on earth would believe that the guy was already dead when I found him. If he knew I'd been there and lifted his wad and his jewelry. The money was all right, and we burned the wallet. But I never dared cash in on the ring, for fear they'd trace it to me."

"But—," Peter began, and stopped. There really was no place to begin to question a story which in no particular fitted the known facts. The room could not have been Morrison's room. There were no French windows in the lodge, and no street that went by it. The dead man could not have been Morrison, for Morrison had been dead only a month. There wasn't even a mantel or a clock!

Yet Callahan had not invented that story. He had not invented it, because he couldn't invent it. He might have been willing to lie, but no one of Callahan's mental caliber could have created these touches of grisly realism—the whirring of the clock before it struck, the "funny feel" of the finger which gave Callahan his first realization that the man was not drunk but dead. He simply could not have made it up! Yet what he had told was physically impossible. The one recognizable fact was the ring. Callahan said the ring had been in his keeping for ten years—yet it had been stolen from Morrison's lodge a month ago.

Peter suddenly gave up the struggle to make sense out of so wild and horrible a grotesquerie. He would yield himself to the impossible, letting it lead him where it would.

"And all this happened—where?" he asked.

"In Piedmont."

"About ten years ago, you say?"

"Eleven years ago this very month."

"Would you know the man again if you saw him?"

"I'll say I would! It was months before I got over wakin' up twichin' in the night, because I'd been dreamin' about him."

"Did you even find out who he was?"

"Sure. It was all in the papers the next day. He was a high-up swell, belongin' to one o' them old Spanish families. I never noticed whether they got anybody for the job of not—I beat it down to Mexico along about then, and I never heard no more about it. But I remember his name all right. It was a mouthful, Jerome de la Montanya, it was."

A thin ray of light pierced Peter's confusion for an instant, and was gone. De la Montanya—de la Spanish families. I never noticed whether they got anybody for the job of not—I beat it down to Mexico along about then, and I never heard no more about it. But I remember his name all right. It was a mouthful, Jerome de la Montanya, it was."

A thin ray of light pierced Peter's confusion for an instant, and was gone. De la Montanya—de la Spanish families. I never noticed whether they got anybody for the job of not—I beat it down to Mexico along about then, and I never heard no more about it. But I remember his name all right. It was a mouthful, Jerome de la Montanya, it was."

A guard strolled over to Peter's side and touched him on the shoulder.

"I'm just getting him to identify some photographs for a story I'm on," Peter explained. "You can see them in a minute."

"That's all right, Peter. I didn't recognize you for a minute. We have to be very careful, you know."

Peter turned from the guard to see Callahan cowering back in his seat, shrinking as far away from the prints as his chair would allow.

"That's—him!" he breathed in a gasping whisper. "Lord, it brings it all back as if it was yesterday."

"What would you say if I told you that this could not be the man you found dead—that it is physically impossible?" Peter leaned forward tensely, watching every flicker of expression on Callahan's face.

"I'd say you was a damn liar," Callahan said with a calm earnestness which carried the depth of his conviction. "That's him, I tell you!"

"And I tell you it can't be. Those photographs were taken a month ago. I saw the man's body myself, and the pictures were taken by my camera man. That is the face of a man named Morrison, who was shot to death in a cabin on a ranch near Hangtown."

"No," Callahan declared flatly. "He wasn't shot. There wasn't a bullet hole in him anywhere. I frisked him, you know, before I found out he was dead."

"But I tell you it couldn't be! This man was murdered, all right, but the circumstances were nothing like those you have given me. I saw the bullet wounds myself. Why I covered the trial of a woman they've just acquitted of his murder! And this ring was stolen from the room where he was killed."

In the face of the man's grim, unassailable certainty, Peter found himself on the defensive. It was he who was trying to convince Callahan that what he was telling was the truth.

"I don't know whether you're crazy, or trying to kid me, or what," Callahan answered. "I don't care what you tell me. I know! I never forget a face. Ask any of the boys, and they'll tell you the same. That's why they call me Snap-Shot Callahan. I never forget a face, and it's a cinch I'd never forget that one. If he hadn't been dead when I found him, that's the way he'd look today. But dead or not, that's him. That's Jerome de la Montanya."

Addresses Heard Yesterday In Santa Ana Churches

'STING OF SIN' SUNDAY TOPIC OF EVANGELIST

Beginning the sixth week of evangelistic services at the Seventh Day Baptist Gospel tent in Orange last night, the Rev. Lester G. Osborn preached to a large congregation on "The Sting of Sin and its Cure." Evangelist Hargis conducted the service, and gave an interpretation of Copping's picture "The Sermon on the Mount." The men's Glee club of the Riverside Seventh Day Baptist church sang two numbers, and Mrs. Hargis played a violin solo.

There is to be no service tonight. Topics for the week as announced today are: Tuesday, "What is the Divine Plan of Salvation?"; Wednesday, "Should Christians Today Keep the Sabbath?"; Thursday, "Rest for a Feverish Age?"; Friday, "Twice-Born?"; Saturday, "Spiritual Sabbathism?"; Sunday, "After Conversion—What?"

The song and vesper service begins at 7:30 p. m. daily, and includes congregational singing, special musical numbers, picture studies, and illustrated hymns.

Delegates Attend Selma Conference

The Rev. and Mrs. H. W. Harlow and Neal Harlow are attending the annual conference of the United Brethren church, which is in session at Selma, California, under the direction of Dr. I. D. Warner, of Portland, Oregon, bishop of the coast area. Other delegates from the Santa Ana United Brethren church are Mrs. J. H. Noble and Mrs. P. Gammell. They report that the sessions are very interesting and helpful.

Rev. Harding Will Leave For Seattle

The Rev. U. E. Harding, pastor of the Church of the Nazarene, is to leave tomorrow night for Seattle, where he will assist in evangelistic services at the Central Nazarene church in that city for a period of several weeks. During his absence the pulpit at the church here will be filled by pastors from surrounding churches, including the Rev. J. E. Williams, of Long Beach.

REV. SCHROCK OUTLINES NEW PROBLEM CREATED FOR CHURCH BY ADVENT OF TALKING FILMS

Meeting trying situations as they arise, doing what the occasion demands while remembering that God is interested, was discussed at the evening service of the First Congregational church last night in a sermon entitled "A Modern Parable" by the Rev. Perry F. Schrock, pastor.

It was brought out in the sermon that for the last 14 years moving pictures have been used at the evening services of the church but that the advent of talking pictures is bringing a problem that requires study of the situation and use of the best judgment.

"Out of the simple, ordinary things of life Jesus drew His parables," the Rev. Mr. Schrock told his congregation. "There are parables in the ordinary experiences of our lives if we can but see them. This service, with a text from the Old Testament, suggests a parable to me."

"Tonight we begin the 14th year in the use of motion pictures in our Sunday evening service. We have had some difficulties and some criticism—helpful and otherwise. But it has been very worthwhile. A real service has been rendered. This Sunday evening service has been a community gathering for a religious service. And we have had most gratifying results. But now we may soon face a trying situation. 'Talking pictures' have supplanted 'movies.' The supply of 'movies' that are suitable for church use is very limited. What shall we do? Shall churches make movies? Shall they use 'talkies'? Shall they develop a new type of service or shall they go back to the old conventional church service? Or shall they do as many eastern churches are doing, give up the Sunday evening service?"

"The answer comes in the text. 'When these signs befall you, do whatever the occasion demands, for God is with you.' The text was a word of counsel that the aged Samuel gave to the young man Saul whom he had just anointed king. We shall follow the advice of Samuel. We shall do as the occasion demands for we believe that God is with us."

"This is a parable for all of us. We all have, at times, situation to meet that perplex us greatly. I have a friend who began work in a bank at 20 years of age. He spent 21 years in banking and then suddenly found himself out of employment. Banking conditions made it almost impossible to secure another banking position. A wife and three children were dependent upon him. It was a serious matter with that man. But it worked out. He did as the occasion demanded and God was with him. He is now in another line of work that promises a better opportunity for advancement, and all is well."

"This text is worth meditating upon. To do as the occasion demands implies two things. It implies that we will really know what the occasion demands. We will study the situation and draw our conclusions from the facts, and then we will use our best judgment. In the language of modern youth, we will 'use the old bean.' And 'God is with you.' The only God that is of any consequences to us is the God who is vitally interested in our affairs. In the working out of the plans of our lives God is with us. 'So when you are troubled and

SATAN'S POWER CHURCH TOPIC IN PLACENTIA

PLACENTIA, Sept. 8.—"There are only two sources of thought in the world today," said the Rev. Charles E. Fuller, speaking at Calvary church, Placentia, Sunday morning on "How To Ascertain the Will of God." "Satan, the prince of the power of the air, is the source of all doubt and disobedience, but the knowledge of the will of God is 'that wisdom which is first pure.'"

"Those who end a prayer with the words 'If it be Thy will' show a doubt that God hears and answers prayer, although back of it is a sincere doubt if they do know God's will. They forget the promise, 'If ye abide in me and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will.'"

"To know the will of God we should first study His word and then pray. Whenever Satan finds a prayerless Christian he sits in the heavens and laughs, for he has found a powerless Christian."

At the evening service the Rev. Harry McArthur of the Pico Union church spoke. Announcements from the Dorcas society were that gifts for the Christmas box for Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Tuggey, South American missionaries, should be in by October 1, as more time is required for delivery than before. Mrs. Grover Murrick is in charge of the box and will receive the gifts.

Members of the Dorcas society who have mite boxes are asked to give them to Mrs. Henry so that they may be opened and returned.

A new department is to be arranged soon, a nursery in one of the class rooms on the second floor. Mrs. Murrick of the Dorcas society and Mrs. Ira MacNamee of the cradle roll will be in charge. A loud speaker will be installed so that no one will miss any of the sermon.

CLASS TEACHER SPEAKS ABOUT CONSERVATION

The Rev. W. S. Buchanan, teacher of the Men's Community Bible class, spoke to the group yesterday morning at the Fox West Coast theater on "Conservation." He prefaced the lesson with a continuation of remarks on the subject he had discussed the previous Sunday, "Life Capital."

"God doesn't like a lazy man," he asserted. "Whatever you do, do it with all your might. Before you loaf around town saying you can't get a living, dig it out. Digging will get you on the inside of worth-while things. The sun gives off energy, get into it and absorb some of its energy."

"America has come to the place today where conservation is being stressed. The men who have gone far in the great enterprises of the nation are those who have worked hard and saved—saved for their employers as well as themselves. Conservation doesn't mean picking up all the pins you see and saving them. It is saving the material for life capital."

"The greatest treasure of all is in the heart. 'Keep thy heart with all diligence for out of it are the issues of life.' Make your heart right and keep it clean. The greatest commandment in life of all is 'Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart.' Paul and Peter both stressed loving from the heart. The heart has been referred to as the seat of reason. Therefore we must guard it, because as we think, so shall we be. Some men are rotten in heart and soul—filled with profanity and vulgarity. They spoil everything they touch. This would not be so, if they had kept their hearts clean."

"God doesn't put men in hell. We do that by our own thoughts and neglect. God asks us to conserve our lives—to be good examples for the boys of the city—and to help others."

Special music at the service yesterday was several piano numbers by Paul LeBarr.

'GOD'S PLAN OF SALVATION' IS OUTLINED ON SUNDAY BY CHURCH OF CHRIST MINISTER

Stressing its greatness and pointing out how we neglect it, the Rev. James H. Sewell preached on the subject "God's Plan of Salvation" yesterday morning at the Broadway and Walnut street Church of Christ. His text was a portion of the third verse of Hebrews 2:1-3, "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?" He said in part:

"Not only is salvation great, but the Aspostle Paul here tells us it is so great, the word 'so' carrying with it the idea of greatness in the superlative degree, and implying that if we neglect it, we neglect such a great thing that the consequences of our neglect are fearful."

"The creation of the physical universe is a manifestation of the power and wisdom of God, but it was not God's purpose that it should be the greatest manifestation of His power, wisdom and love! That supreme manifestation is His great plan of salvation."

"This plan is great because God is the author of it, and it partakes of the prestige and influence and authority of its great Originator. In giving this great plan God exhausted His resources. He gave himself, the greatest gift possible. It is great because of the greatness of its purpose, because of the great, unselfish purpose behind it. Man had sinned, and sin had separated him from God. Something had to be done or he would be cut off from God eternally, for God does not permit sin to enter His presence. So He devised for man a plan of salvation that would cleanse him from past sins and enable him to keep his soul cleansed from sin day by day."

"It is great because it enables man to walk with God here, cheered and encouraged by the assurance that 'all things work together for good to them that love God, to them that are the called according to His purpose.'"

"It is great because it not only enables man to walk with God here, but assures him of a home with God beyond the river of death."

"It is great because of the great sacrifice that was necessary to procure it—the sacrifice of Christ on the cross of Calvary, where He gave His life that we might have salvation from sin."

We neglect this great salvation in three ways—by failing to accept it and becoming Christians; by failing to live in and failing to live the Christian life; by failing in loyalty, devotion and sacrifice for the church."

HOBBIES GIVEN ATTENTION IN PASTOR'S TALK

The Rev. U. E. Harding, pastor of the Church of the Nazarene, spoke Sunday morning on "Hobby Horse Religion," talking for a text Rom. 14:16 "Let not then your good be evil spoken of." He said in part:

"Hobbies are like faults, we all have them, some more than others, but the sad thing about it is, we are blind to our own. Some folks are by their hobby horses like the mountaineers are by their horses and dogs, they will fight over their strength and swiftness quicker than they would over their wives. You can't touch their dogs and horses, and neither can you touch folks, hobbies. They brush them down and pat their shabby coats, and are proud of their hobbies."

"Some of these are good, they may be among the essentials and fundamentals, but folks get tired of seeing you ride the same old horse. Repentance, confession, restitution and baptism are all essential to salvation, but you can ride them to death."

"Then there's the healing hobby, the coming of Christ. These are numerous as the various breeds of horses, like Dukes, Clydesdales, Percherons, Belgians etc. Barns are full of them down the white way under the label of reforms, doctrine and legalism."

"You can get in a rut and not get out, play on a fiddle with one string, far too many single track people. They think only in one channel. A friend of mine while visiting an insane asylum noticed a man riding a broom handle like a little lad. He said kindly to the patient 'you have a fine horse,' and the old man replied, 'this isn't a horse, you can get off a horse,' this is a hobby and I have to ride it forever."

"A good friend of mine once listened to me on this subject and was enjoying it greatly with lots of loud 'amens' until I went into his livery barn and hit his Prohibition Hobby and I almost lost him for a time. He loved his hobby. Prohibition like many other good subjects I have mentioned today has its place but you can ride it to death, until you not only hurt your influence but wreck the very thing you are trying to build."

"I know good men, well trained, who should be useful but they are laid aside, they can't get off their hobbies. Let us adopt for our motto 'In essentials, Unity, in non-essentials, charity, and the middle of the road in all things.'"

Discusses Power Of Salvation In Mission Service
The power of God's salvation was discussed in a recent service at the Gospel Mission, corner of Sixth and French streets, by the Rev. G. M. Henson, pastor, in a sermon on "The Gospel." The Rev. Mr. Henson showed clearly from the Bible and present day facts in human experience the truth and power of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

"Jesus took upon Himself our sins and our sicknesses," the pastor said, "suffering the penalty of the broken law. Having tasted death for every man and thus reconciling the world unto God, He now says 'Whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely.'"

"God offers proof of the power of the Gospel to any man who will do His will."

Pleasant Bridge Event Brings Reunion of Close Friends

When Mr. and Mrs. James E. Lebig were hosts at a bridge on evening last week in their home at 320 Spurgeon street, they assembled a group of guests who have shared countless happy affairs during the past few years, and who were happy to be together again for the first time since early summer, prior to the departure of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Nau and Mrs. C. P. Boyer for summer abroad.

Bridge was especially pleasant amidst the setting of autumnal blossoms with which Mrs. Lebig had increased the charm of her home. In scoring, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Moore took first prize, with Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Richards, second, and the special woman's prize going to Mrs. Anna M. Richards.

The card tables were utilized for serving the delicious little supper menu which brought the happy reunion to a close, and when a beautiful birthday, baked and decorated by Mrs. Anna M. Richards, was placed before the Lebig, the guests learned for the first time that he was in reality, aiding him in an enjoyable celebration of a birthday anniversary.

Military Motif Adds Distinction to Nuptials

Climaxing a romance which budged in the romantic atmosphere of Virginia during the World war, Miss Myrtle Hurt, popular teacher at the local high school, and Lieutenant Frederick H. Harbaugh of San Diego, were married Saturday at noon in the home of Miss Ruth Rowland in Tustin. Miss Rowland and the bride have been friends for a number of years, first beginning their friendship in Missouri before either established her home in Southern California.

Banked with ferns, the fireplace made an effective altar in the living room, and in the midst of the greenery was a basket of gladioluses in varying tones of pink enhanced by a delicate touch of blue. Glowing yellow candles in tall candle-lights shed their soft light over the lovely scene, and the altar effect was continued at a nearby table covered with greenery and bearing a guest book.

The bride was very charming in rose beige chiffon and carrying an arm bouquet of pale pink roses tied with filmy gold lace. She wore a lacy brown hat, and other harmonizing accessories. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Oliver William as matron of honor, wearing a pale-green gown, enhanced by touches of cream lace, and a small hat to correspond. Her bouquet was of yellow Claude Pernet roses.

Attending Lieutenant Harbaugh as best man was Lieutenant Thomas Kilcourse, of San Diego. Commander Harrell Dyer, chaplain at the Marine base in San Diego was the officiating minister. The bride party entered the room to the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March, played by Mrs. Russell Wilson, a niece of Miss Ruth Rowland.

St. Ann's Inn provided a lovely setting for the luncheon which followed, and to which all of the wedding guests were bidden. Place cards were tiny brides and bridegrooms, and nut cups were in soft pastel tones. Centering the table were asters and delphinium in tints of pink and blue. The military motif evidenced in the wedding party and the guest list as well, was continued during the luncheon, when Mrs. Harbaugh cut the wedding cake, a delectable confection topped with a miniature bride and groom, with Lieutenant Harbaugh as groom.

Lieutenant and Mrs. Harbaugh are enjoying a sojourn at the Casa De Manana in La Jolla, and will make their home in San Diego for the next six months. By that time Lieutenant Harbaugh will have completed his service in the marine corps, and the happy couple will enjoy a deferred honeymoon trip to France. They will return to Southern California to make their home.

Mrs. Harbaugh has taught domestic science in the Santa Ana high school for the past two years, prior to which she was a member of a faculty in a school near San Francisco.

Those sharing in the luncheon with Lieutenant and Mrs. Harbaugh were General and Mrs. Robert Dunlap, Colonel and Mrs. Harry Lay, Commander Harrell Dyer, Commander Woods, Captain and Mrs. Glenn Hayes, Lieutenant and Mrs. Thomas Kilcourse, and Lieutenant and Mrs. George W. McHenry, all of San Diego; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Rowland, Dr. and Mrs. Elliott Rowland, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Wilson, Mrs. Oliver William, Miss Ruth Rowland, Mr. and Mrs. Courtney Chandler of Hollywood, and Miss Margaret Comings, of Mo.

Pomona College Co-eds End Vacation With Pretty Party

One of the loveliest parties of the week was that of yesterday afternoon when Miss Edith McFadden and Miss Ruth Tantlinger were co-hostesses at a bridge tea, given in the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur McFadden, 1108 North Main street. Both Miss Tantlinger and Miss McFadden are preparing to enter their senior year at Pomona college, and most of the guests present were college associates.

A brilliant note was lent to the attractive surroundings of the McFadden home by the use of dahlias and zinnias in deep tones of russet, orange and red. Bridge was the diversion of the afternoon, and the refreshment course, which was served late in the day, was especially delightful.

Those sharing the hospitality of Miss Tantlinger and Miss McFadden were the Misses Florence Bagley, Charlotte Moulton, Betty Hoy, Wilma Hoy, Eleanor Crookshank, Marjorie Lindsay and Mrs. Mary Lindsay of this city; Mrs. Rudolph Richards of Pomona; Miss Norma Tantlinger of Tustin, and the Misses Peg Dresser, Dorothy Dowdson, Jane Kuert, Peppy Goldsmith, Elizabeth Brown and Jeanette Gordon of Los Angeles; the Misses Peg Pierce, Helen Leonard, Hilda Hinkley of Redlands; Miss Jean Taft and Miss Helen Post of Santa Monica; Miss Elizabeth Stamm, Miss Jean Baird and Miss Elaine Alexander of Ontario; the Misses Velma Casper, Virginia Colvin, and Ruth Mealey of Glendora; Miss Margaret McKinney and Mrs. Kenneth Kingman of Long Beach; Miss Pauline Manchester of Pasadena, and Miss Carol Welch of Anaheim.

Miss Doris Kearns Is Charming Bride of Wilbur Conrad

In a setting of greenery amidst which unusually beautiful dahlias blazed like autumn fires, Miss Doris Kearns yesterday afternoon spoke her nuptial vows to Wilbur Conrad, at a charmingly planned ceremony held at 4 o'clock in the chapel of the First Methodist Episcopal church.

In keeping with the informal plan of the wedding, a general invitation had been extended to the many friends of the young people, and as the hour of 4 o'clock drew near, the chapel rapidly filled with guests. The decorative effect was quite striking, with entrance to the pews between garlands of smilax and rust-hued pompon dahlias. Graceful green fern fronds were banded at the altar as a background for the bride and groom.

Preceding the ceremony, two appropriate solos were sung by Miss Laura Joiner, "O Promise Me" by Reginald De Koven, and "I Love You Truly" by Carrie Jacobs Bond. Harry Garstang played her accompaniments, following the song recital with Lohengrin's Wedding March by Wagner.

As Mr. Conrad entered the chapel to join the minister, the Rev. J. L. Cameron of Elsinore, he was accompanied by his best man, Francis Horton. His nephew, Francis Conrad, assisted as usher.

Attending her future sister-in-law as honor matron, Mrs. Amsel McBroom, sister of the bridegroom, preceded the entry of the bride. Her gown in apricot georgette, gracefully long and in princess effect, worn with slippers in the same tones, and velvet hat in deep cocoa brown, was extremely becoming to her vivid dark beauty, and a cluster of tall, slender roses and sweet peas in exactly the tones of the gown, completed the attractive effect.

Little Miss Doris Jeanne Conrad as flower girl, wearing a cunning ruffled frock in peach taffeta, and carrying a tulip-tipped basket of rose petals, Doris Jeanne is the dainty small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Conrad of Balboa.

Miss Kearns, entering on the arm of her father, Jasper Kearns, looked like a slim golden princess in tones of old ivory. The bodice was close-fitting beneath a graceful cape-effect swinging from the shoulders, and the skirt fell in lustrous folds to her ivory satin slippers. Instead of a veil, the bride had chosen a delightful little Juliet cap of lace, showing her blond tresses through its meshes. A single strand of pearls and a great cluster of creamy bride roses were other charming details of her effective appearance.

The Rev. Mr. Cameron who officiated in the same capacity for Mr. and Mrs. Jasper Kearns upon their wedding day, and had baptized the bride when a small child.

Following the rites at the church, a reception for relatives and close friends, was held in the Kearns home, 1208 Orange avenue, where the vivid flowers used, ranged from pale apricot through orange to the deep rich russet tones of autumn.

The new Mrs. Conrad made a pretty bride's cake which was served with heart-centered ices and fruit punch. When Mr. and Mrs. Conrad took their departure for a honeymoon to be spent in Catalina Island, the latter wore an unusually smart costume in bottle-green chiffon velvet, with all dress accessories in the same striking shade. Upon their return from the island, they will make their home at 400 South Kemmore avenue, Hollywood, and Mr. Conrad will resume his duties at Robinson's in that city.

Both young people have a world of friends in this city where each was graduated from the Polytechnic high school. The bride followed her graduation with a course at Chouinard's in Los Angeles, while Mr. Conrad entered the business world at once. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel H. Conrad, formerly of this city but now of Costa Mesa.

For the wedding, Mrs. Conrad wore a handsome gown of black flat crepe, and Mrs. Kearns chose an equally becoming costume in deep blue crepe Romaine.

In addition to local friends at the nuptials, there were a number from other cities, including Mr. and Mrs. A. R. McConnell, the Messrs. Ross McConnell and Wright McConnell, and Miss Frances Smith, San Diego; Dr. and Mrs. H. L. Thompson; Dr. and Mrs. Florence Unroe; the Misses Lamont, and Mr. and Mrs. Lambert, Los Angeles; Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Weber, Hollywood; Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Yenne, Miss Helen Potter, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Johnson, Mrs. Mollie Bailor, and W. H. Manch, Long Beach; Dr. and Mrs. Donald Jarvis and children, Mildred, Dorothy and Conrad, of Rockford, Wash.; and Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Stockdale, Whittier.

Fifty-Fifty Club Met in Anaheim Home

Mrs. C. A. Sisson was hostess to members of the Fifty-Fifty club last Friday when she entertained them with an attractive luncheon in her home in Anaheim. A brilliant yellow color scheme was carried out and was evidenced in the bouquets centering the tables.

In the bridge games of the afternoon, Mrs. Mary Schlamman scored high, Mrs. William Batt, second high, and Mrs. Sisson, low. Guests of the day were Mrs. D. H. Thompson and Mrs. R. L. Ballard.

Members present, other than the hostess, were Mesdames George Merriman, William Batt, Mary Schlamman, Daisy McGee and Mrs. B. H. Bauman.

Silver Wedding Day Is Celebrated by Surprise Party

Although Mr. and Mrs. David McBurney of East Second street had made plans for the celebration of their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary on Saturday, September 6, they discovered that evening, that their friends appreciated the significance of the date, and had planned a most enjoyable surprise in commemoration.

All details of the evening had been carefully thought out by the friendly group, even to the series of varied games which offered entertainment. Perhaps the pleasantest feature however, was the presentation to Mr. and Mrs. McBurney, of handsome gifts in silver.

Refreshments had not been forgotten, and later in the evening, were served by those instrumental in making the evening a success. These present in addition to the surprised hosts, Mr. and Mrs. McBurney, were Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Smiley, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. McBurney and family, Mrs. Jennie Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Beall, Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Smiley and baby, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Lund, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Lutz, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. ## J. O. C. Class Dinner Yields Variety of Gay Features

The Eugene McBurney cottage at Newport Beach was the scene of an enjoyable gathering Friday evening when 30 members of the J. O. C. class of the First Baptist Sunday school met for a 6:30 dinner and an evening of merriment. The hostesses were Miss Grace Roberts, Miss Mame Havens and Mrs. Nell Beisel, assisted by Mrs. McBurney and her aunt, Mrs. Roy Beall.

The class was especially happy to welcome home two members, the Misses Lula Minter and Gertrude Minor, who have returned from a six months' trip abroad and who during the evening passed around interesting pictures which they had taken in various countries.

The affair was a covered-dish dinner with the hostesses supplying delicious fried sea bass and the members supplying the "trimmings." After each plate had been heartily served, the hostesses informed the guests that since fish was brain food, they would expect some brilliant answers to a series of clever "fish" questions which were then propounded.

After the dinner a short business session was presided over by the president, Miss Effie White, with devotions conducted by Miss Grace Roberts who chose the 84th Psalm for consideration.

The evening was again given over to the hostess committee who were determined that the guests should make full use of the "brain food" which had been served them. Each one present was required to write a story of twenty words, each word of which must begin with the letter "C." From some of the clever and witty results, it was quite evident that the fish had been most beneficial.

After the hilarity caused by the reading of these stories had quieted down, the hostesses announced that they had saved the best story until last, and Miss Lula Minter was to tell some of the interesting highlights of her recent trip. Miss Minter chose to tell of the various modes and sorts of conveyances in which they rode during their travels. These vehicles ranged from the most modern to those of crudest design and included basket sleds in Funchal on the Madeira Islands, gondolas in Venice, camels in Egypt and an airplane from France to England.

After Miss Minter's talk, Miss Gertrude Minor, who had been her companion on the trip, presented to the class two beautiful panel pictures for the class room. These were copies of famous works of art in Munich, and were companion panels, one representing Peter and John and the other Paul and Mark.

At a late hour the guests departed with warmly expressed appreciation to Mrs. McBurney and Mrs. Beall who had so graciously opened their cottage and to the hostess committee who had provided such a delightful evening.

At the conclusion of the interesting contest a delectable refreshment course was served.

Those sharing the pleasant event with Miss McFadden were the Misses Audrey Dohmer, Edith Bailey, Helen Wiesseman, Jean Hoy, Rebekah McPeak, Marjorie Lindsay, Dorothy Dunbar, Arline Crawford, Bernice Summers, Arleen Adams, Jane Walker, Elizabeth Ranker, Marian Cruickshank, Helen Stauffer, Mary Mater, Ruth Gardner, Helen Gardner, Virginia McCauley and Evelyn Walker.

Little Maid's Birthday Made Occasion For Dinner Party

Entertaining yesterday in their charming new home at 1702 West Ninth street, Mr. and Mrs. William E. Cummings were hosts at a delightful dinner, honoring the third birthday anniversary of their little daughter, Betty Roselyn.

Table decorations were appropriately carried out in a delicate tint of pink, and centered around a cake adorned with three gleaming candles. Nut cups, candies, and glassware continued in the chosen color scheme, while asters in pastel tints added their effective note to the pretty scene.

Little Betty Roselyn received a number of lovely gifts, and although she is perhaps too young to appreciate them fully, the fact that she was more than delighted as an honor guest was evidenced by her sparkling eyes.

Those sharing the pleasant affair with Mr. and Mrs. Cummings and Betty Roselyn were Mr. and Mrs. Timman Anthony, and Mr. and Mrs. Earl W. Phillips, of Orange, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Weis and son Edward, Jr., and daughter, Katherine, and Little Dorothy-Darleen Cummings, a daughter of the home.

NEW WAFFLE IRON SHOULD BE TEMPERED

Tempering a new waffle iron isn't quite as easy as it sounds. I have just tamed one, so I'll pass on my information to you, not that you may need the information at this moment, but for future reference.

When you buy your waffle iron buy at the same time a small ten-cent paint brush. Heat the new waffle iron ten minutes, "as is," then open it and brush both top and bottom grids with olive oil. Don't be stingy with the oil, especially on the top grid. See that the brush hits every hole and corner in each grid.

Shut the iron and again heat it, this time seven minutes. Open and pour in waffle batter for the first waffle and don't be afraid to let it bake sufficiently—this is to sop up all the burnt oil and finish on the grids. Throw this waffle away and bake another. If it comes out clean and crisp the iron is then ready for use. If it does not, clean out all the sticky bits, brush on more oil, bake another waffle and continue baking them on the ungreased iron until the waffle will come out as it should. Sometimes it is necessary to bake a full bowl of batter to properly temper the iron. Tomorrow I will give you a waffle recipe and reasons why some waffles stick, and why some are tough.

FOUR STARS OF 'FOLLOW THRU'

Jack Haley, Zelma O'Neil, Nancy Carroll and Charles Rogers in "Follow Thru," great stage comedy and song picture which opens a four-day run at the Fox Broadway theater today.

'FOLLOW THRU' AT FOX-BD'WAY TODAY

Black-haired, black-eyed, handsome Charles Rogers and red-haired, blue-eyed Nancy Carroll, the lovers of "Able's Irish Rose," of "Close Harmony," make a "peach of a pair" in Paramount's all-Technicolor moving picture production of the famous Schwab and Mandel stage hit, "Follow Thru."

"Follow Thru," which will open today at the Fox Broadway theater, for four days, is a love story with a golf club setting and a world of comedy. Laurence Schwab, himself, went to Hollywood to direct it in conjunction with Lloyd Corrigan, taking with him everything he needed from the original two-year Broadway hit, including Zelma O'Neil and Jack Haley, its lively, youthful, convulsing comic leads. Also he brought with him the catchy song hits, including "Button Up Your Overcoat," and Paramount song writers supplied him with a few new ones.

"Follow Thru" is a pert and peppy outdoor story. Nancy Carroll, with ambitions to win a championship crown on the links, diverts her attention from golf to the handsome club professional, Charles Rogers, and gives her rival, Thelma Todd, a chance to hole out first. Successful on the fairways, Thelma tries her talent at love-making, but Nancy refuses to give her any advantage there. Rogers has an eye for golf champions, so that Nancy, to win a husband, has first to win the golf crown.

RONALD COLMAN AT WEST COAST

Out of the maze of romantic antiquity, "Raffles," the Amateur Cracksmen strides the screen again.

And surely no "Raffles" has ever brought to the familiar role of the dashing thief such amazing likability as Ronald Colman portrays at the Fox West Coast theater, where Samuel Goldwyn's all-talking version of the internationally famous melodrama opened yesterday.

Lady Gwen, portrayed by Kay Francis, is an innovation among Colman heroines, a gorgeous brunette and incidentally the first dark-haired leading lady ever to play opposite that romantic hero.

Inspired by her love, the Cracksmen quite his life of crime and excitement only to be inevitably brought back to it by the need of a friend. He journeys to the country home of Lord and Lady Melrose in search of the famous Melrose diamonds—and while there, shows his skill as the most famous cricketer in all England.

The photography by George Barnes and Gregg Toland is near perfection. These two cameramen have filmed every Colman production since the days of "The Dark Angel," and their skill seems constantly more effective.

Altogether, "Raffles" is a production such as comes to our screens but rarely—perhaps once or twice in a season. It is likewise a production which every member of the family will enjoy. Don't miss it.

"I SAVED $18 LAST MONTH on Daily Transportation ... and I'm doing it again this month, without making any sacrifice."

"I LIVE a little over 13 miles from my office in Los Angeles," said this man who lives in a suburban city, "over a fine boulevard, but heavy traffic all the way. For two years I fought it twice every day...26 miles. It wore me out and I couldn't figure it cost me a bit less than 4 cents a mile. My friends said it was more. Some of them figured their costs as high as 6 and 7 cents a mile.

"Then one day I read an ad that said, 'Ride the Big Red Cars...' they'll save you from $10 to $35 a month." It said the commutation fares were only a fraction over ONE CENT a mile, that there was no traffic fight, no parking bother or fees, and that I could rest and read while riding.

"It went on to say that schedules were planned to meet my needs, and that hundreds of thousands of busy people were riding the Red Cars to and from work every day. It suggested a ten-day trial to prove all these things for myself. I'm glad I took them up on it.

"Now I catch the car near my house every morning, read my paper or a magazine on the way to town, and I'm at the office before I know it. Going home I arrive rested, and enjoy my dinner. My wife says I'm going to keep on riding the Big Red Cars as long as I commute, and that's one thing we agree on.

"I liked the ten days so well I stretched it to a month, and figured I saved at least $18 in that time, besides parking fees. My wife likes it, because she doesn't worry any more about my having an accident in traffic. I haven't been late to the office even once during the month, and I feel a lot fresher on the job when I get there. I'm glad I made the test. I've told my friends about it, and several of them are trying the Big Red Cars this month."

A voice that the world has been waiting over a year to hear speaks from the screen at Walker's State theater, where Lon Chaney is appearing in his first and last talkie, "The Unholy Three."

Choice of his famous silent success for his debut as a vocal screen star was happy, for it enabled Chaney to use five different voice disguises. In fact, it is as difficult for his fans to guess what his voice really sounds like as it is to guess what the make-up master's face is really like, when not disguised.

THE TINYMITES

STORY BY HAL COCHRAN — PICTURES BY KNICK
REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

The Coliseum is, no doubt, one thing the whole world's read about," exclaimed the kindly Travel Man. "It is a monstrous place. Fully 50,000 people once could sit and watch athletic stunts. Bold gladiators used to stage most every sort of race.

"And folks had comfort in those days, protected from the strong sun's rays by awnings that spread out and added to the thrilling sight. One of the best things we've seen yet, it's something you will never forget." "You bet we won't. It's wonderful," said Scouty Tiny-mite.

And then the whole bunch walked around and every place they stopped they found another sight of interest. They were thrilled as thrilled could be. Soon everyone heard Clowdy shout, "Oh, watch that water gushing out. That is the finest fountain that I ever hope to see."

"Fontana Di Trevi is the name of that spot. It had earned its fame," explained the kindly Travel Man. "There's Neptune, perched up high. It is good luck, the people think, to stop and take a real deep drink. That's what most of the people do before they pass by.

"Then, too, folks stop and drop coins in. This makes the little urchin grin. He promptly goes awading so's to fish the money out." "That's interesting," Copy said. "And just like stories I have read. I certainly am pleased to know what it is all about."

Just then a flower boy sauntered by and Clowdy shouted, "Here, lad! I would like to buy a little flower." "Oh, yes, sir," said the lad. The Travel Man then bought each one a flower. It was a lot of fun to see the flower boy spread a smile. The sale had made him glad.

Late News From Orange County Communities

Newport Beach Proves Popular With Vacationists

PORT SECTION GROWTH SHOWN BY UTILITIES

NEWPORT-BALBOA, Sept. 8.—Fifty per cent more people are spending their vacations here now than after Labor day last year, according to real estate men and managers of public utilities, who can estimate the number of those who are using light, water, phones and gas.

The chief reason why Newport and Balboa have always had a good "summer" season, they say, is because people who have children going to school must be here during the summer school vacation in order to give their children the benefits of bay and ocean.

Many who can have their vacations at other periods, however, now plan to take it in September and October, which months, as a matter of fact, most people regard as the finest of the season at this and other Orange county vacation places.

The Newport harbor union high school, at Fifteenth and Irvine streets, Newport Heights, which opens for its first year on September 22, will also, of course, keep people here the year around who would in most cases have gone out of Orange county had there been no high school here.

"The fact that California as a whole is regarded as a winter resort more than a summer vacation playground makes it appear anomalous to some that the beach cities of Orange county have heretofore been much quieter in winter than summer, but this year more than ever before Newport bay is evolving into the all-year class," said a prominent realtor.

"Telephones have increased about 25 per cent in one year in the Newport Beach exchange, and other public utilities have shown similar gains. The growth in September, year ago, will be still greater. The new high school, a higher class of recreation and building and the chamber of commerce warmer winters, cooler summers campaign are some of the reasons to which this growth is attributed.

CROWD ATTRACTED TO NEWPORT DANCE

NEWPORT-BALBOA, Sept. 8.—The third annual street dance at Twenty-first street, Newport, Saturday night, drew a larger attendance and was a bigger event in every way than any of its predecessors of 1928 and 1929.

In addition to dancing, which was indulged in by many hundreds of high class vaudeville acts were staged by the Newport Harbor Chamber of Commerce, a special committee consisting of L. L. Isbell, E. L. Moore and Secretary G. C. Macleod making the arrangements.

BAY USED FOR SCENES IN NEW MOVIE SERIAL

NEWPORT-BALBOA, Sept. 8.—A company from the Universal studios is here this week to make the first part of a serial sound film, "Fingerprints," in which boats and airplanes are used extensively.

Kenneth Harlan is the leading man in the picture, and Fletcher Norton, Edna Murphy and Gertrude Astor are some of the other actors and actresses taking part. Norman Lazey, production manager, and Ray Taylor and Joe Levi-gard, directors, are among the others on the job.

During the filming a secret service man, portrayed by Harlan, is to be kidnapped, and he is to be rescued by being taken from a boat to a plane. The operations here are expected to take nearly all this week.

SANTA ROSA MAN LA HABRA SPEAKER

LA HABRA, Sept. 8.—The Rev. Mr. Patmore, of Santa Rosa, was the speaker at the morning and evening services at the Christian church Sunday. He will spend the week in La Habra looking over the field and will conduct the services next Sunday. If after that everything is agreeable with the pastor and the congregation, it is thought possible he will be employed as a permanent pastor of the church.

The Rev. Mr. Patmore spoke in part as follows: "Are you one of those working against God? When I entered the ministry, many of my friends discouraged me by saying there were better opportunities in other lines, more money, that I was too young and many other excuses. These friends were working against God although they did not seem to know it."

"What would become of business if we spent as little time on it as we do in studying the Bible, or what would be the result of the home, or the child if as little time was spent in their care as most people spend at their religion. Undoubtedly all would fail. Many people never heard the name of Christ during the course of the day except by an oath."

The Winner

A large group of the thousands of registrants in our name contest were present last night when Mrs. Odessa Moore, 505 West Fifth street, Santa Ana telephone operator, was presented with $50 in gold and our new name PALM GARDENS, suggested by her—was wafted to the summer night breezes over "Radio P. C. G. C."

Mrs. Moore's card No. 479 was dated Aug. 18, at 3:10 p. m. Others who suggested PALM GARDENS were Mrs. R. M. Keeler, 112 W. Camille, Santa Ana; Mrs. William M. Miller, 1220 Cypress Ave., Santa Ana, and Mrs. E. D. Harpold of Huntington Beach, under numbers 1865, 2999 and 3647.

Three persons suggested PALM GARDEN: Mrs. A. J. Garfield, of Balboa; E. F. Sheldon, 1121 Cypress, Santa Ana, and Edward H. Brown, 2010 S. Garnsey, Santa Ana. Mrs. Garfield had ticket No. 119 and Mr. Sheldon had No. 182, either of which lacked only the letter "S" of being "in the money."

Altogether the contest has been a tremendous success. We congratulate the winner—and ourselves as well.

SHERLOCK HOLMES—Case of the "Gloria Scott"

The Stranger Vanishes

BY SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE

"A minute later, when Hunter rushed out with the dog, the man was gone. He ran all around the buildings, but found no trace of him."

"Did he lock the door?" I asked. Holmes replied that he did, and added the window was too small to admit a man.

"So you're one of those cursed fouts," the boy exclaimed, "I'll show you how we serve 'em here. He rushed across the stable to unlodge the dog. The girl fled toward the house, but as the man looked back toward the stable and saw the stranger leaning through the window."

SOUTH AMERICAN REVOLTS

An epidemic of revolutions has broken out in South America. News from South America has never been adequate. Many of the countries have censorship; some of them have not been over-friendly to the United States the last few years. At this time it is difficult to determine the connection between the deposition of President Leguia, of Peru, President Siles, of Bolivia, and President Yrigoyen, of Argentina.

The people of Peru and of Bolivia are of the same racial stock. They speak the same language and have the same resources and industries. Mountain barriers separate the two republics. Bolivia is in the upper region of the Amazon and is connected with the Pacific by a railroad which runs south of Peru.

Argentina has not been friendly to the United States of late. It is a rich country, proud, independent.

Argentina alone of the southern republic has great agricultural and stock-raising areas similar to those of the United States. Argentinean public opinion was much prejudiced by economic acts regarded as injurious to that country. These acts included an investigation by the United States tariff commission of Argentinean flaxseed and corn, regarded by the Argentinean people as preliminary to a higher tariff; then the embargo by the United States Department of Agriculture on Argentinean beef which was somewhat modified by a licensing system. There are other instances which Argentinean people regarded as arrogant discrimination but which many people in this country would regard as self-protection. Threats, however, have served to establish an unfriendliness which is bitter trade rivalry.

There are those who hope for the overthrow that whomever succeeds President Yrigoyen will prove more friendly to our country.

Now comes a revolution and some one will be in authority there who will be more "friendly" and will salaam possibly to our country. We wonder if there is any connection between the revolution, and those who desire to have the government somewhat under the "friendly" direction of the United States. Such things have happened and may happen again. These revolutions certainly will teach the rulers a lesson that they need Big Brother to protect them, and incidentally it has come to pass sometimes that the kind of government that needs protection looks to the United States for that aid. It pays to lie close to the great power.

Peru is reported to be suffering a period of acute financial depression. Taxes are extremely high. A writer in the New Republic attributes the overthrow of President Leguia of Peru to his "unconcealed friendship for this country." Certainly the change in Peru does not presage an increased friendship with this country, whatever may be the case in Argentina.

The culmination of a growing dislike for dictators, brought to a head by financial depression may be at the root of the three revolts, in Peru, Bolivia, and Argentina. A new awareness of the importance of the South Americas has been sweeping over us and we cannot now be indifferent to the upheavals which are taking place there. Travelers to those countries, and those who are interested in international affairs will grasp eagerly at all news they can get about events there.

If you would avoid being soaked, advise the office philosopher, keep away from watered stock.

INTREPID ADVENTURERS

At last the remains of all three who were in the Andree exploration group which started to make the North Pole in a balloon 33 years ago, have been found.

Hope had been given up years ago that any further evidence of the finality of the ill-fated expedition would ever reach the world, but held in the fastnesses of the ice through all this generation, the evidences have been kept intact and the world will now learn undoubtedly, from the diary that Andree kept, the occurrences up to within a few days of his death.

There is something still that stirs the heart and thrills the soul in the intrepid work of such men as Andree. Unquestionably to all there comes uncanny thoughts, suggestions and thrills concerning one who starts out in the full flush of health and life into the unknown and never returns. Our minds have reverted many times to what difficulties and privations and despair met Andree and his two companions before death really, in kindness released them from their work and worry.

It seems but a few weeks ago when five planes started for Honolulu, in one of them a woman, bold to rashness, and only two of them were ever again heard from. In this latter case, it is too much to hope that any further news will be brought from them, for unlike the barren white island, the great deep will not give up its secrets.

MAINE GOES REPUBLICAN

Today an election is being held in Maine. Every one expects that the Republicans will win. Maine is normally strongly Republican. It has always been said that: "As Maine goes, so goes the Union." This has usually been true, but our country is normally Republican, as is Maine.

It takes nothing short of a cataclysm to change Maine from the Republican to the Democratic column. The indifference of the voters today does not evidence that such is the case in Maine.

MECHANICAL COTTON-PICKER

When Eli Whitney invented the cotton gin, it revolutionized the South. It reduced the price of cotton; it increased the acreage, and it temporarily made cotton king. While this great invention separated the seed from the cotton, it still required many thousands of cotton pickers to fill their baskets and take them to the mill.

Our pictures of the South and of Southern plantations are of the colored men and women in the white-dotted fields, singing at their work as they proceed to fill their baskets. Now this picture is soon to be turned to the wall. The romance of the cotton fields will soon be over. A mechanical cotton picker has been invented, and has been placed in use on a plantation in Texas, where it is able to pick cotton from three to five rows simultaneously, the average being 1500 to 3000 pounds daily, according to the inventor. It is operated by a six-horsepower gasoline motor. Yes, it is the machine age, Where will the workers go?

A Rumanian girl, says a news item, is nearly seven feet tall and is still growing. If she is depressed now, she's in for a circus later on.

IMPORTANT PRIMARIES

A number of states will hold their primaries tomorrow. In Michigan a very interesting contest is on, where in the most populous Congressional district in the United States, consisting of over a million and a quarter people, a fight has been made against the incumbent, Grant M. Hudson, a militant "dry," by two or three opponents, among them an attorney running on an anti-dry platform.

There is a run-off primary in South Carolina, which will determine whether South Carolina will continue to send Cole L. Blease to the United States Senate or James F. Byrnes. There are primaries in Washington and also in Georgia. The "wet" and "dry" issue is prominent in a number of these places, particularly in Washington.

"The Old West Coast"

Riverside Daily Press

William Morrow and Company of New York, have just published a very interesting book on early California history "On the Old West Coast." The material had been collected by Major Horace Bell and on his death was turned over to his daughter. She was fortunate in securing the interest of Lanier Bartlett in his valuable and interesting material; and he undertook to edit it. The new book is the result of his work.

One chapter deals with the boom of 1885-88 and there is a vivid account of the promotion of a subdivision near Hesperia by covering Joshua trees with oranges and making the tenderfeet think they grew there. Another chapter tells of the visit of Major Bell to a party of immigrants in the early fifties who had come to California over the Colorado desert and were camped on the Temescal canyon near the present Glen Ivy hot springs. Still another chapter discusses the Peg Leg mine; and old timers in Riverside will recall that Tom Cover lost his life hunting for this lost mine.

Mr. Bartlett has handled the material collected by Major Bell with sympathetic understanding and literary skill; and the result is an exceedingly interesting book.

The writer remembers Major Bell when he was editing the weekly Porcupine in Los Angeles; he was a picturesque figure in those days and his earlier history in the state was full of stirring incidents. Had he lived to see the Los Angeles of today with practically 1,250,000 population, he might be less severe in his condemnation of the boom of 45 years ago.

The Bankers Only By Sufferance

The Fresno Republican

And still the debate goes on as to who "rules" the country.

Some say the lawyers.
Some the bankers.
Some the technicians.
The farmers agree that they at least do not. But should!

Lets offer one opinion. That the people who rule this country are those who "intend" to rule it. Indifference never ruled anything.

As to the bankers, the one thing that the World war taught the bankers was that they could not rule anything.

They had been credited with ruling the world so long that they got to believing it themselves. And then came the Great War. It was a war that they, more than any other one class of persons, dreaded. For the bankers were getting theirs without the gambling uncertainties of a war.

They discovered that, if the rulers of the world took the notion, they would reach into the banks and take all the money they could put their hands on without any by-your-leave.

The man who has money stands in much greater danger of losing it than the man who has not. Just now the money hoarders in Moscow are discovering this truth. The Soviet administration searches them, takes their coin, and shoots them at any hour in the day. They have no respect for sunrise.

Hunting Kept on Basis of Sportsman-

ship By Canada

San Bernardino Sun

Canada, as the hunting season opens, forbids hunting birds and beasts with airplanes, motor cars, machine guns, powder boats, sailboats or goggles. In this last prohibition the Dominion is getting back pretty far toward the primitive hunting day.

Such limitations are necessary, on this continent, with the increase of population and the improvement of locomotion and weapons. In the old Indian days, and in our own pioneer days, there was game enough for everyone even when hunters used the most up-to-date means of killing. Now, if we are not careful, there will soon be nothing left to kill. Self-control is to the hunter's own interest.

There is another angle to it, too. Hunting is no longer a necessity, but a sport. In sport we try to give our antagonist a square deal. If we are sportsmen, hunting for the fun of hunting, what satisfaction can there be in taking unfair advantages of the birds and animals, to whom it is not a question of sport but of life and death?

To make the odds more nearly even, and the game more interesting, we may yet have to get back to the bow and arrow of Robin Hood and Hiawatha.

PUZZLING PROPOSITION

The gun-man is a moron,
Devoid of sense or wit,
Whom you and I would classify
As mentally unfit.
His brow is low and narrow;
His nose is short and flat,
In him we find no trace of mind,
But while he has his "gat,"
He dally does his evil bit
And calmly gets away with it.

The gangster is a low-brow;
One never can detect
In his grim face the slightest trace
Of active intellect.
But more and more his quarrels
Disturb the public peace,
And every day in every way
His warlike ranks increase,
While brainy folk like me and you
Cry: "What's this country coming to?"

Our parents and our teachers
Have taught us from our birth
That thought with strength and power is fraught
And brains must rule the earth.
But gun-men, crooks and gangsters
Their stern vocation ply.
They shoot and fight by day and night
While bullets sing and fly.
If brains are bulwarks of the strong
There must be somewhere something wrong!

A Weigh With Stylish Stouts

By WILLIAM TRUFANT FOSTER
and WADDILL CATCHINGS

Those persons, if there are any, whose privacy has not been invaded since the Census may take heart. A new questionnaire is under way. It will be sponsored by the League for the Protection of Stylish Stouts. It will be sent to department store mailing lists, and its chief question will be: "Do you prefer to buy from saleswomen with boyish figures, or from those featuring curves?"

All this comes about because the efficiency experts of a New Jersey department store have issued the order: "The stout saleswoman must go." In these days of high rent, we are told, space is something more than a philosophical abstraction. It has become a luxury. There is not enough of it to go around—at least not enough of it to go around stout salesladies.

Long ago we learned, on good authority, that there are three kinds of lies: Plain lies, damned lies, and statistics. When we receive our copy of the new questionnaire, we shall be tempted to reply: "There are three kinds of fools; plain fools, damned fools, and efficiency experts."

Our own idea of an efficient saleswoman is one who sells goods. That is an old-fashioned notion, no doubt, but we still think there is something in it. We wouldn't care how much room she took up behind the counter, as long as she kept plenty of satisfied buyers in front of it.

We have seen a stout saleswoman so abounding in courtesy, good nature, tact, and knowledge of her stocks that she deserved a whole floor in which to exercise her talents. On the other hand, we have seen a thin, vinegary saleswoman so—but why bring that up?

Anyway there is problem enough already in "technological unemployment"—the displacement of men by machines. Why add the displacement of women by weighing machines?

Thoughts On Modern Life

By GLENN FRANK

THE CALL TO BUSINESS

When war looms on the horizon of a people, there is a prompt call to arms.

When economic depression falls upon a land, there should be a prompt call to business.

But what usually takes place is a call to politics. We begin damning the business men who have proved incapable of preventing the debacle, and we cry to government to fetch the pulmotor.

I belong to that minority of liberals who are becoming increasingly skeptical of the power of politics to administer the social order of a technical age.

The current world-wide economic depression calls not so much for a new type of politician, however desperately we may need him for a multitude of reasons, as for a new type of business man.

Any one could drive old Dobbin hitched to the buck-board.

It requires technical skill to drive a high-powered motor.

The driver of the high-powered motor must, of course, expect the public to assume a keener interest in his driving than it displayed in the driving of old Dobbin's master.

Even old Dobbin could run away, now and then, and crack an occasional skull, but the danger from runaway horses was intermittent and insignificant compared with the danger of 25,000,000 ignorantly driven motors.

Where power is in full swing, public interest must keep alert, lest power be misused.

But Congress does not turn chauffeur because the public must have its motors driven intelligently.

The analogy between the nation's interest in well-driven motors and the nation's interest in a well-run economic system is accurate.

The role of politics in a technical age, like ours, is radically different from the role of politics in a pastoral age, like the age of our fathers.

Let us be clear about one thing!

We shall emerge from the current world-wide economic depression, not because we elect this or that man to political office, but when the business men and industrialists of the Western world scrap their obsolete motives and methods and follow the lead of the saving minority of economic statesmen the age has bred.

OUR CHILDREN

By ANGELO PATRI
FRIENDSHIP

To the Boys and Girls:

There are two parts of your job—your job of growing up. There is the preparation—study and work that gives you the skill and the power to work well. That is one half. The other half is the power to get on well with people; to make people like you.

You remember the farmer's fine cow? She gave more and better milk than any other cow in the herd but she kicked the bucket of milk over every time. As there was no good for the farmer in that process he sold the cow for beef, the cheapest end a cow can have.

I have known many people like that cow. They have fine gifts. They can teach, or paint, or sell, or build, a far better than the next worker in their fields, but they spend more time in blocking with people than they do in working so they fail and have to be sold out.

Getting along with people is an art by itself. It requires thought and it has its own technique. But any healthy minded person can master the secret if he will. Of course first of all he must wish to be friendly, desire to make people like him. Then he sets to work to bring about that liking and that friendliness.

The first rule is: "Think of the other person first." Keep yourself in the background. Listen to what the other person has to say. Good listeners are scarce and greatly prized. If you are engaged to work for the other man, take down his directions and do your very best to do what he wants done.

You may think your idea is better but unless he invites an expression of your idea keep it to yourself. If your work is good he will very soon ask your opinion and consider it worth while. But if all the time he is telling you what he wants done, you keep telling him what he ought to want and how it should be done, he will shun you.

The second rule I would offer you is this—"Keep your tongue under control." Whenever you feel a smart retort rising to the tip of your tongue bite it down. You will never be sorry for what you didn't say. Keep the smart things, the sharp words, the "piece of your mind," for your private enjoyment. When you have thought them over a few times they will lose all their brilliancy and you will rejoice that you had sense enough to keep them to yourself.

One more thing is highly important to you. Keep the debt in your favor. Try to do more than is asked of you. Instead of asking favors, grant them. Don't be afraid of spending yourself in service for there is no better way to grow in power and grace and in the appreciation of your fellows than just that.

If you would make good in your field forget yourself and put all your energy into the job. Live happily with other people. A desert island is a lonely place yet some boys and girls seem to be fitting themselves for that sort of life. The only person they can abide is their own self. There is no fun in that, and no growth. (Copyright, 1930, The Bell Syn., Inc.)

THE GALVESTON TORNADO

On Sept. 8, 1900, a West Indian hurricane drove a tidal wave across the city of Galveston, Tex., and caused what is said to be the greatest disaster in the history of the North American continent.

More than 8000 persons lost their lives and property estimated to be worth $20,000,000 was destroyed overnight. The entire city was submerged to a depth of from four to 16 feet.

A report of the disaster at the time reads in part as follows: "The combined attack of the hurricane and tidal wave produced indescribable horrors—the destruction of property sinking into insignificance when compared with the appalling loss of life. Practically all food supplies had been destroyed and the drinking water supply had been cut off. Military administration was made necessary and many ghastly looters and plunderers were summarily shot, either in the act of robbing the dead or upon evidence of guilt."

Help was poured in from all parts of the world, and out of the storm emerged a wrecked city with a nucleus of 20,000 left from a prosperous community of 38,000. Since the storm the population has more than trebled, a model municipal government has been established and gigantic engineering projects carried to a successful completion.
